Not by Bread Or Bombs Alone

Man cannot live by bread alone and, apparently he cannot survive by bombs alone.

I reach this conclusion after reading the May issue of "Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists," a publication to which I subscribe and which leads me often into strange pastures where I cannot graze with full satisfaction on the equations and atomic phrases. This is true, though they are made as simple as possible by the physicists dealing with nuclear science.

There is an article in the Bulletin about the hydrogen bomb. The author is Dr. Robert F. Bacher, head of the departments of Physics, Mathematics, and Astronomy at the California Institute of Technology.

Wet, Green Wood

Dr. Bacher tells us quite frankly there is not yet complete assurance we can make a hydrogen bomb. There is no assurance at all we can control one should we evolve it.

The difficulty lies in attaining, and maintaining, a temperature equivalent to that at the center of the sun. The atomic bomb, at the moment of explosion, creates such heat. But for the hydrogen bomb the materials must be heated hot enough and kept hot.

"Such a problem," says Dr. Backer, "is a little bit like the job of making a fire at 20 degrees below zero in the mountains with green wood which is covered with ice and with very little kindling."

But, he adds, with scientific matter-of-factness, "scientists tell us that such a fire probably can be kindled."

In other words, we likely can make the bomb.

We still can't control it. But, we may have it if we wish it.

War and Peace

Now, the question we all ask is, "Will hydrogen bombs increase our chance of winning a war with minimum loss?"

Dr. Bacher doesn't think so.

Using figures announced at the time of President Truman's notice the bomb would be made, Dr. Bacher declares a bomb of the size mentioned (larger ones can be made) would destroy everything within a ten-mile radius and the flash-burn of it would be severely effective for a distance of 30 miles.

This would destroy, for exemple, all of metropolitan Los Angeles. It would smash all of Atlanta's area to the farthest suburbs and would seriously burn residents in Lawrenceville, Ga. In Miami, it would shatter all Miami, Miami Beach, Coral Gables, Coconut Grove and more distant suburbs. It would sear citizens in Fort Lauderdale and The Glades.

Clouds, buildings, hills or other obstructions would, of course, reduce the effect of a bomb exploded two miles in the air. But in general, the effect is as above.

Our Security

Ah, then, we say, that is the bomb we want! It will make us secure!

Dr. Bacher doubts it. In fact, he is downright discouraging about it, and his logic is sound.

First, he says, the problem is one of delivery.

If the Russians could not break through our defenses to drop them from the air, they could, he says, bring them in by tramp steamer, to any of our large seacoast cities. It would be a simple method for a surprise attack—a Russian ship in all strategic harbors.

On the other hand, we would have to go by air. There are no Russian coastal cities of importance. And, anyhow, we are not going to become the aggressor.

The discouraging deduction is—the hydrogen bomb would be a more effective weapon for Russia than us.

"The tragic fact is," says Dr. Bacher, "the hydrogen bomb won't save us and it isn't even a very good addition to our military potential."

Submarines

If the Russians move into Western Germany we would be faced with the prospect of war.

Right away we would have to use atomic bombs and we would have to send more troops and supplies to Europe. The Berlin airlift was wonderful, but it was not supplying a vast war effort. We would be hard put to supply them.

Dr. Bacher thinks the greatest problem we have is not bombs but how to run down and defeat the enemy submarines which, with the snorkel tube, are a lot tougher than in the last war—when they were very, very tough indeed.

Free speech and open discussion, he thinks, is the answer to getting somewhere. I agree. I have read more cheerful publications than this nuclear bulletin, but it does clear the atmosphere of a lot of bunk and hysteria. Too many persons smugly think only in terms of the bombs.

Adenauer Asks Unity In Europe

Seeks Economic, Defense Gain From 'Third Power'

By DREW MIDDLETON

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

FRANKFORT — Konrad Adenauer, Chancellor of Western Germany, yesterday called for the formation of a United Europe as "a third power" strong enough to "decide in favor of peace" and pledged his word that the federal republic will make "all the efforts in our power" to put into effect the plan of French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman for the integration of German and French heavy industry.

The Chancellor's statements, regarded here and at Bonn as the most important he has made since the end of the Foreign Ministers' meeting in London, occurred in a speech before a rally of the Christian Democratic Union at Cologne yesterday. The doubts which the Chancellor and other leaders of the government coalition entertained over European unity a few weeks ago appear to have been swept away. For the first time there is real enthusiasm for the idea, both because of its economic advantages and because it appears to offer a means of lifting the fear of war which weighs so heavily upon the German people.

Schuman sees British assent in economic pooling plan. Story on Page 2.

Both Chancellor Adenauer and his Minister of Labor, Anton Storch, who spoke at Langenfield, near Duesseldorf, Saturday night, emphasized the power for peace of a united Europe.

A united Europe, including Britain, will never be strong enough to endanger either the Soviet Union or the United States, the Chancellor said, but would be strong enough "to throw its weight on the scales in favor of peace."

The Chancellor warned that the tensions between the Soviet Union and the United States may lead to an explosion that would "exterminate" Europe and declared that the way to prevent this is to organize and unite Europe.

"There will be no strong Europe without Germany," he added, "and there will be no Germany at all without Europe."

Herr Storch went further than Adenauer in some respects. He declared that 250,000,000 people of Western Europe must form a bloc to prevent a conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union, but the Labor Minister tnen added the customary, indeed inevitable, demands which so often mar Allied-German relations.

The Western Powers, he said, must end the restrictions on German steel production and shipbuilding and Europe must realize that European recovery is linked to German recovery. The West German government, Storch added, hopes that the occupation statute will be lifted completely this Autumn and the international authority for the Ruhr "removed or reassigned to function for the whole of Europe."

The two speeches stress both of the broad lines along which German political thought has moved since the end of the London conference.

The first, the most admirable and helpful of these, is the belief that the Western Powers, particularly the United States, are genuinely anxious for German equality in a united Europe, and that as a result, Germany, as Chancellor Adenauer confided to a friend recently, would be untrue to herself and to Europe if she held back any longer.

The second and less attractive line of thought is symbolized by Storch's references to the end of the occupation statute and industrial restrictions. It springs from the idea that the Western Powers would never have spoken so kindly about Germany and promised so much in the future at London if they had not been terrified at the task of holding the Soviet Union in check without German industrial, and ultimately military, assistance.

"A QUIET, CALM SUNDAY AFTERNOON"
Traffic at Peachtree and Fifth Streets Yesterday Afternoon

Bus Strike Deadlock Unchanged

More Vehicles Promised on Streets Today

By MILTON CHAMBERS

More "courtesy cars" are scheduled to appear on Atlanta streets today but no progress is reported in bringing the strike of transit workers to an end.

The Union, the Company, and Mayor Hartsfield reported nothing new late yesterday.

Union Pres. Jesse Walton said that the Union would "endeavor to furnish sufficient cars on every line today" to help out those who have been unable to procure transportation. At the same time he asked for the "co-operation of everyone."

Several hundred of the operator-driven vehicles will be in operation identified by a yellow placard on the windshield with black letters identifying it as a "courtesy car."

Both Walton and C. B. McManus, Power Company executive, stated that no progress had been made in negotiations toward settlement of union and company differences.

Mayor Hartsfield said he would have no statement to make about municipal action until today, but intimated that something might be forthcoming this morning.

The outcome of a weekend meeting of McManus and Walton with Hartsfield ended with comments from each that they were standing pat. McManus stated the Company could not afford wage increases with present fares and Walton that the Company was using the argument as an excuse for raising rates.

Hartsfield earlier said that neither City nor State had the power to operate the trolleys in place of the company and that further action would come after a period of watching and waiting. Some quarters were reported advocating granting of other transportation franchises.

J. C. Steinmetz, head of the Suburban Lines, said that his company did not have the equipment necessary for extending the service even if granted permission to operate within the city The line already has State approval, he said, but added that the Company is not considering widening its operations.

15 Children Drown As Bridge Falls

VENICE, Italy —(AP)— Fifteen children drowned yesterday when a footbridge over a canal at Cavarzere, south of Venice, collapsed while a religious procession was crossing it.

Several priests and 50 children were on the bridge when it fell with them into the deep and swift waters of Gorzone Canal.

Quake Rocks Peru City, Levels Districts, Kills 50

CUZCO, Peru—(UP)—A violent earthquake rocked this ancient Inca capital yesterday, leveling entire districts and leaving hardly a building unscarred.

The first official count said 50 dead had been recovered from the rubble and at least 250 persons were known to have been injured. Rescue workers combed the ruins by torchlight for bodies of "many more" victims feared still buried.

It was the most violent quake in the memory of the fear-stricken of this 900-year-old city, once the capital of the vast Inca Indian empire and the first capital of modern Peru.

Fires broke out in various sections immediately following the quake which lasted but four to six seconds.

The surviving citizens of this city of 50,000 were spending the night in plazas and open fields, fearful that another tremor might send weakened structures still standing crashing down on them

The city was without electricity and relief stations operated on the corners of its narrow cobblestoned streets with hastily-rigged emergency lighting.

Hospitals were packed with the injured, as soldier and civilian rescuers continued to bring in cases.

Overworked doctors were given a hand by Dr. J. Crespo, Professor of Ecuador's School of Medicine, and 11 of his students who were visiting Cuzco when the quake struck.

The temblor toppled many historic buildings into the streets of Cuzco. All of the city's scores of churches—some of which had withstood the severe earthquake of 1650—suffered damage.

The building damaged the least was the modern four-story Hotel Cuzco, which was filled with foreign tourists who were sitting down to lunch when the quake struck. Some of its walls cracked but none of the guests was hurt.

Pardo Avenue, site of some of Cuzco's most modern and finest homes, was completely leveled, and the entire suburb of San Sebastian was wiped out.

The casualties of the temblor probably would have been higher but for the fortunate chance that 15,000 persons—nearly a third of the city's 50,000 people—were at a football game when the quake started. None was hurt.

The quake struck the ancient capital of the Incas at 1:35 p. m. It lasted only a few seconds, but it was strong enough to topple structures which had stood for centuries, sending up a great cloud of dust which, hours later, still filled the mountain air.

Red Boats Blown to Maneuvers

Briton Demands Get-Out Order

LONDON—(UP)—Strong winds and heavy seas drove a fleet of 31 Russian vessels to shelter last night half a mile off England's southwest coast within easy sailing distance of today's British, Dutch and French naval maneuvers.

Nine British warships steamed toward the Bay of Biscay for the maneuvers. A short time later the Russian vessels hoisted anchor and followed in the same general direction. But last night they nestled in Mounts Bay near Lands End.

Official British Naval quarters said there was no special significance to the appearance of the Soviet vessels, but they admitted last night that every move of the Red fishing fleet was being reported to Royal Navy Headquarters at Plymouth.

Lord Vansittart, former Foreign Undersecretary, viewed the "intrusion" with such suspicion that he demanded the British Government invite the Russians to leave immediately. He wondered if Russia was trying to provoke an incident.

The flotilla, led by the trawler Tambov, had been anchored near Falmouth, 70 or 80 miles from the Royal Navy rendezvous off Portland. Shortly after noon the vessels steamed out in single file; last night they were anchoring near Portleven, around Lizard peninsula from Falmouth.

Appearance of the vessels was front page news in Britain and the Sunday Times said:

"It is not quite clear why Russia should be transferring about 30 vessels from the Baltic to the Black Sea."

The May 22-29 exercise begins in the Bay of Biscay, through which the Russian vessels will pass if they proceed toward the Black Sea. Customs officials who boarded the Tambov Saturday said the Russians told them they were fishing for sardines and sprats en route.

The nine British ships, led by the aircraft carrier Implacable, will exercise with two French cruisers, The Netherlands carrier Karel Doorman and Netherlands cruisers and submarines.

The naval exercise is commanded by V. Adm. J. J. L. Willinge, of the Netherlands Navy, and will test submarines, Britain's air coastal defenses and secret radar apparatus. Later exercises will send ships and planes ranging around most of Western Europe.

Naval authorities recalled that Soviet vessels have been reported in the vicinity of several postwar naval exercises staged by Western nations. They pointed out that the Russian ships, largely trawlers, were apparently new and speedy vessels.

Jet Crash In Spalding Kills Pilot

With a "ripping on one side and a crashing on the other," a Marine Corps F9F jet fighter crashed into a field seven miles northeast of Griffin yesterday. The pilot was killed and burned in the wreckage.

A Navy investigation crew, headed by Lt. Cmdr. Ben Johnson, Operations Officer at the Atlanta Naval Air Station, said that the largest piece of plane so far discovered "could be put into a desk letter basket."

The plane apparently exploded on impact, Johnson said, leaving a crater approximately 35 feet across and 25 feet deep. Identification of the craft was made through manufacturers' tags found in the crater.

Johnson said the plane was based at the Marine Corps station at Cherry Point, N. C., and had been flying alone. There were apparently no eyewitnesses to the cash, he said.

The pilot will not be identified until completion of the investigation.

Reds Seen Yielding On Berlin Rally

Reported Banning Disorders, Barring West Zone to Youths

By RICHARD S. WEIL

BERLIN—(INS)—The Russians have ordered Communist youths to keep out of West Berlin next Sunday during their Whitsuntide demonstration but American troops are being alerted to defend the city with their lives—just in case.

The apparent Soviet retreat in the Berlin cold war was disclosed yesterday by East German Deputy Premier Walter Ulbright to East German Communist leaders.

He said that the Soviet politburo sent special instruction to East German Communists to "take all necessary measures to insure that there are no disorders in West Berlin at Whitsuntide," when 500,000 German youths are scheduled to converge on the city.

Ulbright said the instructions explained "the time for annihilation of bases of imperialism by force, has not yet arrived."

American, British and French officials said, however, that they are taking no chances. A Communist invasion of Berlin's western sectors undoubedly would provoke determined resistance.

Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, U. S. commandant in Berlin, said all U. S. troops in the city are being placed on a continuous combat alert so that they will be prepared to "defend the city with their arms and lives, if necessary."

Taylor added:

"However, I frankly do not expect any sensational developments. Whitsuntide most likely will be a pleasant holiday."

He said the primary defense of the western sectors against a possible Communist invasion will be in the hands of German police, who will be aided, if necessary, by vigilante squads organized by West German political parties.

Taylor jocularly commented that a "good spanking" may be the best thing for the Free German youth organization which is sponsoring the march on Berlin.

Ulbright, in advising East German leaders of the Soviet instructions to keep things peaceful next Sunday, said the advance publicity given the Communist demonstration has "served a valuable purpose."

Ulbright declared it has "struck fear in Western Germany and the Western Powers" and added:

"Widespread anxiety is disrupting West Berlin's economy because businessmen have no confidence in contracting for goods or providing credit."

Showers Due Late Today

Strike-bound Atlantans will have fine hiking weather this morning, according to the weatherman, but look out for this afternoon.

The skies will be partly cloudy and the temperature warmer both today and tomorrow, according to the forecast, but there is a slight chance that scattered showers will plague Atlanta's pedestrians this afternoon.

CLOUDY

High reading today is scheduled to reach 74 after a base marker of 58 early this morning. Tomorrow's temperature is expected to range between 62 and 82. The top temperature yesterday went no higher than 64 during the cloudy afternoon after a low of 56 was shown for the morning.

Six Deaths in Traffic Lead Accident Reports

A new upsurge of accidents cut through the State yesterday, killing six Georgians and leaving more than a score injured.

A series of spectacular accidents, many of which involved utility poles and brick walls, resulted in injury to 16 persons in traffic-congested Atlanta.

Dead are Alice Gray, 10, of Dalton; William Cleveland Duncan, of Adel; John Coney, John Slaughter, Leonard Smith and Clarence Bethune, all of Macon.

Miss Gray, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Gray, was killed when the car in which she was riding collided with an N., C. and St. L. passenger train at Tunnel Hill, 10 miles north of Dalton, in Whitfield County. The child's father was reported in "fair" condition at the Dalton Hospital.

Bethune, who was injured in a car accident May 2, died last night, three days after he was discharged from a hospital after apparent recovery.

Duncan was killed instantly in a wreck near Porterfield. Eight other persons injured in the accident are listed as Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Staplin, of Oak Park, Ill., and their daughter, Sandra; Johnny Mallard, Ethel Lee Harris, Harris Mallard, Sam Harris and John Mallard, all of Oglethorpe, Georgia.

Coney, who lives at 3707 Houston Avenue, Macon, was found lying alongside Highway 41, near Jackson's Tourist Camp, south of Maçon. Coney told hospital attendants he was thrown from a moving automobile, and Sheriff E. Julian Peacock says that his deputies are investigating the incident.

Slaughter died following a Saturday night accident when the horse-drawn wagon in which he was riding collided with an automobile and threw him to the pavement.

Smith, who was injured in a fight Friday night, died of a fractured skull.

Six teen-agers from Lithia Springs and Douglasville were injured, three seriously, when the car in which they were riding went out of control and smashed into a pole at Marietta Street, near Corput St., N. W.

Police said Marion C. Mayfield,

New Blasts, Fire Harass Jersey Area

Phosphorous Blazes And Sets Off Mines

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

SOUTH AMBOY, N. J.—While police, military and civil authorities continued their unsuccessful efforts to determine the cause of Friday night's explosion of an estimated 500 tons of dynamite and mines that all but wrecked this city of 8,000, a spectacular fire broke out yesterday afternoon in the waterfront blast area. Sixty heavy explosions were recorded within an hour. There were no casualties.

The fire broke out in a 20-ton pile of phosphorus in the storage yard of the Agricultural Chemical Company plant 100 yards from the "powder dock" where four barges loaded with land mines and four freight cars similarly laden blew up Friday night.

Within minutes a column of acrid white smoke rose to over 1,000 feet. Slowly it spread across Raritan Bay to blanket the shore lines of Perth Amboy and Southern Staten Island.

Meanwhile, heavy explosions caused by heat detonation of mines strewn about the blast area scattered debris in a wide arc. Billows of flame fed by the phosphorus and flying mine fragments forced Army demolition crews and fire fighters from the dock sector.

It was decided at disaster headquarters here to let the fire burn itself out. Supt. of New Jersey State Police Charles Schoeffel announced there was no danger of the fire's spreading from the blasted area.

Bomb disposal troops from First Army Headquarters in New York, however, were ordered out of the danger zones for two hours. When the fire had subsided, the Army continued its collection of scattered mines and fuse caps. Lt. Hugh Casey, commanding the bomb disposal detail, reported that 1,200 antipersonnel mines and 500 detonating caps had been recovered by his men.

McCarthy's Charges Stick In Students' Minds, Test Shows

By JAMES RESTON
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

MADISON, Wis.—An incident occurred at the University of Wisconsin the other day which suggests that at least part of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's charges against the State Department have stuck in the Middlewestern mind.

An instructor in the University's School of Journalism asked 43 third-year students, as part of a test on current affairs, "What position does Owen J. Lattimore, under accusation by Sen. McCarthy, hold in the State Department?"

McCarthy has charged that Lattimore was "the chief architect of U. S. Far Eastern policy," and he has said that Lattimore had "a desk" in the State Department, but he has never asserted that he now holds an official position there.

Nevertheless, of these 43 university students who have been trained for two years in critical reading of newspapers and cautious listening to news broadcasts, only 15 answered the question correctly.

One student said that Professor Lattimore was "the head of the Foreign Policy of the United States," a job specifically assigned to the President by the Constitution. Another said he was "in charge of Far Eastern Affairs at the State Department." A third said he was "in charge of our Chinese Foreign Policy."

Other answers: "A special agent in the State Department;" "Foreign Ambassador to Iran;" "Counsellor in the Near East Embassy;" (whatever that is;) "Special Ambassador to Turkey and the Near East;" and finally, "A Communist" who was an "Adviser on Far Eastern Affairs."

The late Raymond Clapper used to say: "Never underestimate the intelligence of the American people, but never overestimate their information either." This seems to apply to the McCarthy case out here. The original charges covered so much ground, the rebuttals occupied such a small percentage of the total coverage, and the political preference of this State is so predominately Republican that the proved facts are now all mixed up with the charges, counter-charges and subjective wishes of the readers.

Foreign affairs is still far from the most popular topic of conversation in this part of the country. The meetings of the Foreign Ministers in London last week, though they dealt with fundamental and even revolutionary ideas, seemed to provoke very little private discussion, and this aloofness is certainly working in Sen. McCarthy's favor.

Isolationism may be dead in the Middle west, as most observers here seem almost too eager to assert, but the reaction to foreign policy questions is certainly different here than in the Capital.

In Washington, the conduct of foreign policy is a life and death matter for those who participate in it, but out here for many people it is still largely a spectator sport. The business community is flourishing economically and so are the farmers, but they are still suspicious, and even hostile to their government, which they think of as something outside themselves, as a vast impersonal "they" on whom many of the complexities of life are inevitably pinned.

It is anybody's guess what the political consequences of this feeling may be, for while the farmers here may not like the present government, they like what they get out of it in terms of subsidies. Some politicians, however, are gambling that the people are just enough disillusioned by the Administration's post-war record in foreign affairs, that they are ready to listen to a kind of modified isolationism, which seems to include more than a touch of McCarthyism.

The McCarthy case may have spread suspicion of those who are in government, but it has certainly not increased the desire of the undergraduates to take on the responsibilities of those who serve their government.

One asks in the fraternity and other student houses how many are thinking about going into government service, but the affirmative answers are few and far between.

In short, the great divide, in foreign policy, still lies, not at the Rockies but along the Allegheny Range. The Middlewest may not be isolationist, but is isolated from Washington and vice versa.

Workers' Increased Output One Cause of Unemployment

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Federal Reserve Board said last night increased output per worker had been one cause of rising unemployment since last Summer.

The higher average has meant more total production without corresponding rise in workers, the Federal Reserve Bulletin for May observed.

Increased installation of "new machinery and equipment of highly efficient design" and more efficient management of working staffs has helped in lifting output averages, the publication said.

The result was seen in mounting unemployment as the growth in population brought a growth in the number of job seekers.

The Federal Reserve analysis of "labor market developments" pointed to these influences at work on the part of business management:

1. "Large profits and strong financial position in recent years, which have encouraged business to spend record amounts for new machinery and equipment of highly efficient design.

2. "Intensified competitive pressure on management to reduce costs, partly by curtailing employment and by utilizing those employed more efficiently than earlier in the postwar period..."

In addition to the effects of rising population in raising the number of job seekers, the Board said, there has been an "increased tendency for married women to work outside the home," and a similar trend among teen-agers.

Bank Assets Reach New All-Time Peak

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported last night bank assets reached "an all-time peak" at the start of this year.

A $4,000,000,000 increase during last year put the total up to $180,000,000,000, topping the previous record of December, 1945, by $2,000,000,000, FDIC Chairman Maple T. Harl said.

The report covered the standing of all America's 14,736 banks.

Flood Still Threatens Winnipeg

Weary Fighters Urged to Stand By

WINNIPEG, Man.—(UP)—Tired flood fighters were warned yesterday, "the danger is not over."

"Any feeling of security is illusory," said Chief Flood Controller Brig. R. E. A. Morton.

City Engineer W. D. Hurst said it might take four days before the water level dorps noticeably.

The weary 55,000 men along the dikes bolstered eroding levees on a six-mile front in the southern suburb of Fort Garry where the water pounded a slender barricade and threatened some 2,000 homes in the prosperous River Heights residential district.

Flood headquarters said that generally the 20-mile network of dikes still was holding. The water went down half an inch Saturday. The Weather Bureau provided cheer in reporting there was no immediate pospect of further rain, which could make the situation worse.

A slight shrinking has been reported in the giant lake of flood water covering almost 600 square miles of Manitoba between Winnipeg and the international boundary 70 miles to the south.

The muddy foul-smelling Red River covers 17 percent of the city's 60 square miles.

Some of the city's 110,000 evacuees began to trickle back against wishes of flood control officials.

Britain Neutral On Industry Pool, French Envoy Says

By HAROLD CALLENDER
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

PARIS—Belief that the British government would not oppose his proposal for pooling French and German coal and steel industries was expressed yesterday by Robert Schuman, the French foreign minister, in a speech to the National Congress of his party, the Popular Republican Movement, at Nantes.

It had been predicted here that the British might seek to block the French-German economic merger by persuading the United States that it was a disguised form of cartel. To gain at least Britain's benevolent neutrality toward the project was M. Schuman's purpose in summoning Jean Monnet, French Planning Commissioner, to London during the foreign ministers' conference last week.

Remarking that the proposal had taken the British by surprise M. Schuman said "what determined our action was the conviction that we must move fast and that France alone could usefully take the initiative." He aded that "our English friends appreciate our motives, they are studying the consequences and methods and the attitude of the English government justifies our hopes of success." He said same was true of the attitudes of Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

M. Schuman emphasized the "exclusive pacific character" of the pool scheme. He said that in advancing it France had sought political as well as economic ends and desired to "give hope to those who cling to peace."

M. Schuman laid down these "essential principles" of the French proposal "on which it is not possible to compromise:"

1. Creation of an international authority over the merged industries that would be independent, would be an organ neither of governments nor of private interests and would exercise its powers in the interest of nations in the pool.

2. A reform of operating methods of the industries and perfection of their equipment in order to lower prices and raise the quality of output.

3. An increase of volume of production and creation of an "internal" market having a special tariff system and safeguarded against competition.

4. Harmonization of conditions of production in the member countries.

Speaking of the new Atlantic Treaty Committee M. Schuman said "we have obtained the clear agreement that the objective of this collective defense organization is prevention of any invasion. It is not a question of winning a war or of being liberated. It is a question of not being occupied and we must be able to resist together from the first hour."

Four Negroes were injured, one of them critically in an auto-utility pole smashup at Fair Street and St. Jose Street.

Ptl. F. L. Russell and W. J. Wilson said Willie James Davenport, 20, of 598 University Ave., S. W., suffered severe lacerations of the neck and throat. His condition was described as "fair." He was a passenger in an automobile allegedly driven by James Hutchins, 19, of 196 Ollie St., N. W. Police said Hutchins' car went out of control, smashed into the utility pole, snapping it off.

Homer S. Stinson, 18, of 629 Crew St., S. W., and Alfonso Coney, 17, of 1093 Coleman St., S. W., also passengers in the car, were treated for minor injuries.

Hutchins was booked on charges of speeding-accident; no driver's license; failing to remain at, and failing to report, an accident. He was ordered held pending outcome of Davenport's condition.

Mistaking the Georgia Power Company trolley underpass between Whitehall Street and Peters Street for a thoroughfare caused an out-of-town motorist to smash into a brick wall, causing injury to himself and three passengers.

Ptl. Russell and Wilson said Robert C. Smith told him he didn't see the sharp curve and brick abutment in time to avoid a head-on smashup. Smith, who was booked on charges of drunk operating-accident, was treated for bruises and lacerations.

Sarah Lecouris, 27, of Chattanooga, was treated for abrasions of arms and legs; Flora White, of Chattanooga, received treatment for bruises and abrasions, and C. W. Cochran, 27, of 1170 Francis St., N. W., was treated for a possible fracture of the chin. All were passengers in the Smith car.

An early morning race on Whitehall St., S. W., ended in a three-car collision at Whitehall and McDaniel Street and injury to a Negro pedestrian, police reported.

Ptl. Fussell and Wilson said they spotted two cars racing toward town on Whitehall Street, but before they could turn around to halt them one of the machines overran a red light, struck a second car and hurled it into a third machine. The first car allegedly operated by Johnny Shirley, then caromed off and struck the pedestrian identified as Ed Holmes, 59, of 480 Fair St., S. W. Holmes suffered a possible fracture of the left leg and back injuries.

The police said Shirley was booked on charges of drunk operating-accident, overruning a red light and no driver's license.

Ralph Burgess, driver of the second car, was booked on charges of speeding 45 miles per hour although his car was not involved in the accident.

Losing his balance as the truck on which he was riding turned from Lauren Street into Mozley Place, S. W., Jack Hason, 19, of Decatur, suffered possible head and body injuries. Police said no charges were filed against the driver of the truck.

Willie Dukes, Negro, of 466 Jones Ave., N. W. suffered a bruised chest and face injuries in an accident at West Whitehall and Park Street. Police said Dukes was riding in an auto that was struck by another machine.

Five members of a Stockbridge family were injured in an auto accident on Highway 42 south of Conley.

The injured, none of whom was seriously hurt, were listed as William Henry, Laura Frances, Leroy Herbert, Suella Fran and Miriam Alice Gibson.

Preston B. Heald, 19, of Conley, was hurt in an auto accident on the Jonesboro Road just below the bridge. He suffered face and leg injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. James Trew, of Cleveland, Tenn., were injured when the motorcycle they were riding was involved in an accident on Highway 41 four miles north of Atlanta.

FEPC Backers Claim Gains In Senate

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Senate civil rights backers appeared yesterday to be gaining ground in their 12-year-old fight to gag Southern Democrats opponents of President Truman's sharply disputed program.

While the 52-to-32 vote Friday to shut off talk on the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill was 12 short of the required two-thirds majority, it was the largest Senate vote ever recorded for a racial-rights measure.

Both critics and supporters agreed in advance it was the most controversial of all Mr. Truman's civil rights proposals.

The CIO Political Action Committee said in its weekly bulletin the six Republican votes against FEPC was a "payoff" by Sen. Robert A. Taft, Republican, Ohio, to Dixie Senators who helped block the President's plan to overhaul the National Labor Relations Board.

Taft already has denied similar charges by Columnist Drew Pearson. The CIO favored both FEPC and the NLRB reorganization plan.

Friday's vote generally was regarded as having killed FEPC in this Congress. But Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas, Illinois, has promised another attempt at some unannounced time to curb debate on his pending motion to take up the bill.

U. S. Rocket Has Ceiling Up to 12 Miles—Collins

Missile Uses Seek-Out Device To Hit, Dstroy Enemy Craft

By JOHN STUART
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

NEW YORK—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, broadcast here yesterday that the Army has a hitherto undisclosed, ground-launched, antiaircraft rocket, capable of seeking and destroying an enemy bomber or other aircraft as high as 12 miles above the earth.

He gave few details, other than that it is called the Loki after the Norse god to whose powers were attributed the ability to loose all the forces of hell. From the point of view of a possible invader, he said the weapon was well named. "We will do just that if attacked," he said.

The announcement proved the most important point in a Columbia Broadcasting System celebration here of Armed Forces Week.

Despite Gen. Collins' revelation of the Loki's defensive powers—he had mentioned it without naming it and without detail in a broadcast on April 25, also declaring that an improved version was under development—Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Air Force for Operations, described the present radar warning network and fighter-interceptor forces as woefully inadequate to defend the United States under the best utilization of the authorized strength of a 48-group Air Force.

Louis Johnson, Secretary of Defense, who wound up the broadcast i na recorded interview, was optimistic about the state of the Armed Forces generally, confident no war was imminent, and forcefully explicit in denying reports he would resign his Cabinet post by July 1.

Optimistic reports were given for the Navy and Marine Corps on the broadcast. Vice Adm. Lynde DePuy McCormick, Vice Chief of Naval Operations, expressed confidence the Navy, being rapidly modernized and changed, could control the sea lanes in any hostilities through its fast carrier task forces, its missile ships, its hunter-killers and other antisubmarine units and devices, despite the menace of a huge fleet of Russian Schnorkel submarines.

Though announcement previously had been made of successes by both Navy and Air Force in the development of rockets which guided themselves to an air target as well as to a ground target and exploded through use of a proximity fuse within lethal range of enemy airplanes, all of them were described as launched from airplanes.

"The new weapon can fire to 60,000 feet," Collins said, "which is well up, I can assure you, and there it can destroy attacking planes. This is an extremely important development in the defense of American homes and factories."

U. S. Arms Extension Foreseen

NEW ORLEANS — (AP) — Vice President Alben Barkley says the United States must maintain armed forces throughout the world and perhaps occupy more countries before the cold war ends.

He did not name the countries that may be occupied nor the nation that would make the occupation necessary. The Vice President said, however, that "we must drive back this monster that has crept over the earth, destroying the freedom of man."

Barkley spoke here last night at an Armed Forces Day banquet.

He said after World War II the United States hoped an institution could be set up to prevent future wars.

"But we couldn't foresee that one of our partners in that war who fought side by side with us would become so selfish and so domineering that it would block the peace," the Vice President said.

Barkley said there "seems little prospect of a peace treaty."

His first mention of Soviet Russia came later in his address. He urged the people not to become discouraged and pointed out the centuries-old fight of the Polish people for their independence.

"They find themselves (now) with a government imposed on them by the Soviet Union," he said. "All of their freedom of liberty, pursuit of happiness, freedom of speech, press and religion are gone because Communism has snuffed them out."

Sales Tax Seen for S. Carolina

Debated Issue May Hold Solons 2 Weeks

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(INS)—The possibility of a general sales tax may mean the current session of the South Carolina Legislature will run at least two more weeks.

A second report of the free conference committee on the appropriations bill, which committee members say would impose the controversial sales tax, is due this week.

The general opinion among observers yesterday is that the sales tax will be adopted.

However, that would keep the legislators in Columbia for at least two more weeks.

With a critical need for additional revenue, there appears to be little the General Assembly could do but accept the sales tax to finance school construction, student transportation, and raises for teachers and state employees.

The tax is expected to be a graduated one on the following schedule:

1. Tangible goods selling for ten cents or less would not be taxed.
2. Tangible goods, with some exemptions, selling from 11 cents to 35 cents would carry a one-cent tax.
3. Goods costing from 36 to 65 cents would carry a two-cent tax.
4. A three-cent tax would be imposed on goods selling from 66 cents to $1.
5. For items selling from $1 up, the tax would be one cent for each 33⅓ cents.
6. There would be no maximum limit and the tax would apply to everything from cigarets to automobiles, and to articles used in the State, regardless of where the purchase was made.

Exemptions are expected to include livestock, poultry and dairy products sold by the producer, seeds, fertilizers, milk, school lunches and transportation, electricity and gasoline.

Wherry Favors Secret Quiz On Sex Cases

WASHINGTON— (UP) —Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry, Nebraska, yesterday indorsed a move to hold secret hearings in the pending investigation of sex perversion among Federal employees.

He also promised to raise "no strenuous objections" if Vice President Alben W. Barkley assigns the investigation to the Senate Executive Expenditures subcommittee headed by Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, Democrat, North Carolina.

Barkley is scheduled to rule today on which Senate committee will look into the charges aired by Wherry last week that there are 3,750 homosexuals working in Government agencies here. Informed sources expect Barkley to give the nod to Hoey's group, which handled the recent inquiry into capital "Five Percenters."

Drawl Baffles 'I'd Climb---' Starlet Here

Starlet Barbara Bates, who is in Georgia's hill country today for a role in "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain," plopped down out of the skies at Municipal Airport yesterday and ran smack into that "Sou-thun" accent at its Hollywood worst.

The man on the airport's loudspeaker was drawling his instructions about as slow as mountain sorghum pours in the Wintertime—which means plenty slow and plenty thick.

"Bag-gage from th' Chaw-lotte plane now bein' loaded on a bus at th' front of th' tum-i-nal," came the voice of the Southern gentleman.

"What's he saying?" whispered pretty Miss Bates, obviously frustrated by her first introduction to the Deep South which was supposed to be sunny and hot but instead was damp, chilly and dismal. And, too, the last part of her flight had been rough, which helped to make things a bit topsy-turvy.

"Just wait till you get to Cleveland," chuckled Tom Conners, an assistant on the movie being filmed in the North Georgia mountains. "Up there I have to ask everybody to spell his name."

Miss Bates, whom you may remember as daughter Ernestine in "Cheaper by the Dozen," likes her supporting role as Jenny Brock in "I'd Climb . . ." In fact, she thinks it's her very best so far. She had just completed her finishing scenes in "All About Eve," a flicker starring Bette Davis, before boarding her plane for Atlanta.

Born in Denver, she's thoroughly familiar with mountains but is enthusiastic about the much-publicized North Georgia variety. She is considered one of the film capital's rising stars at 24. She has been married five years.

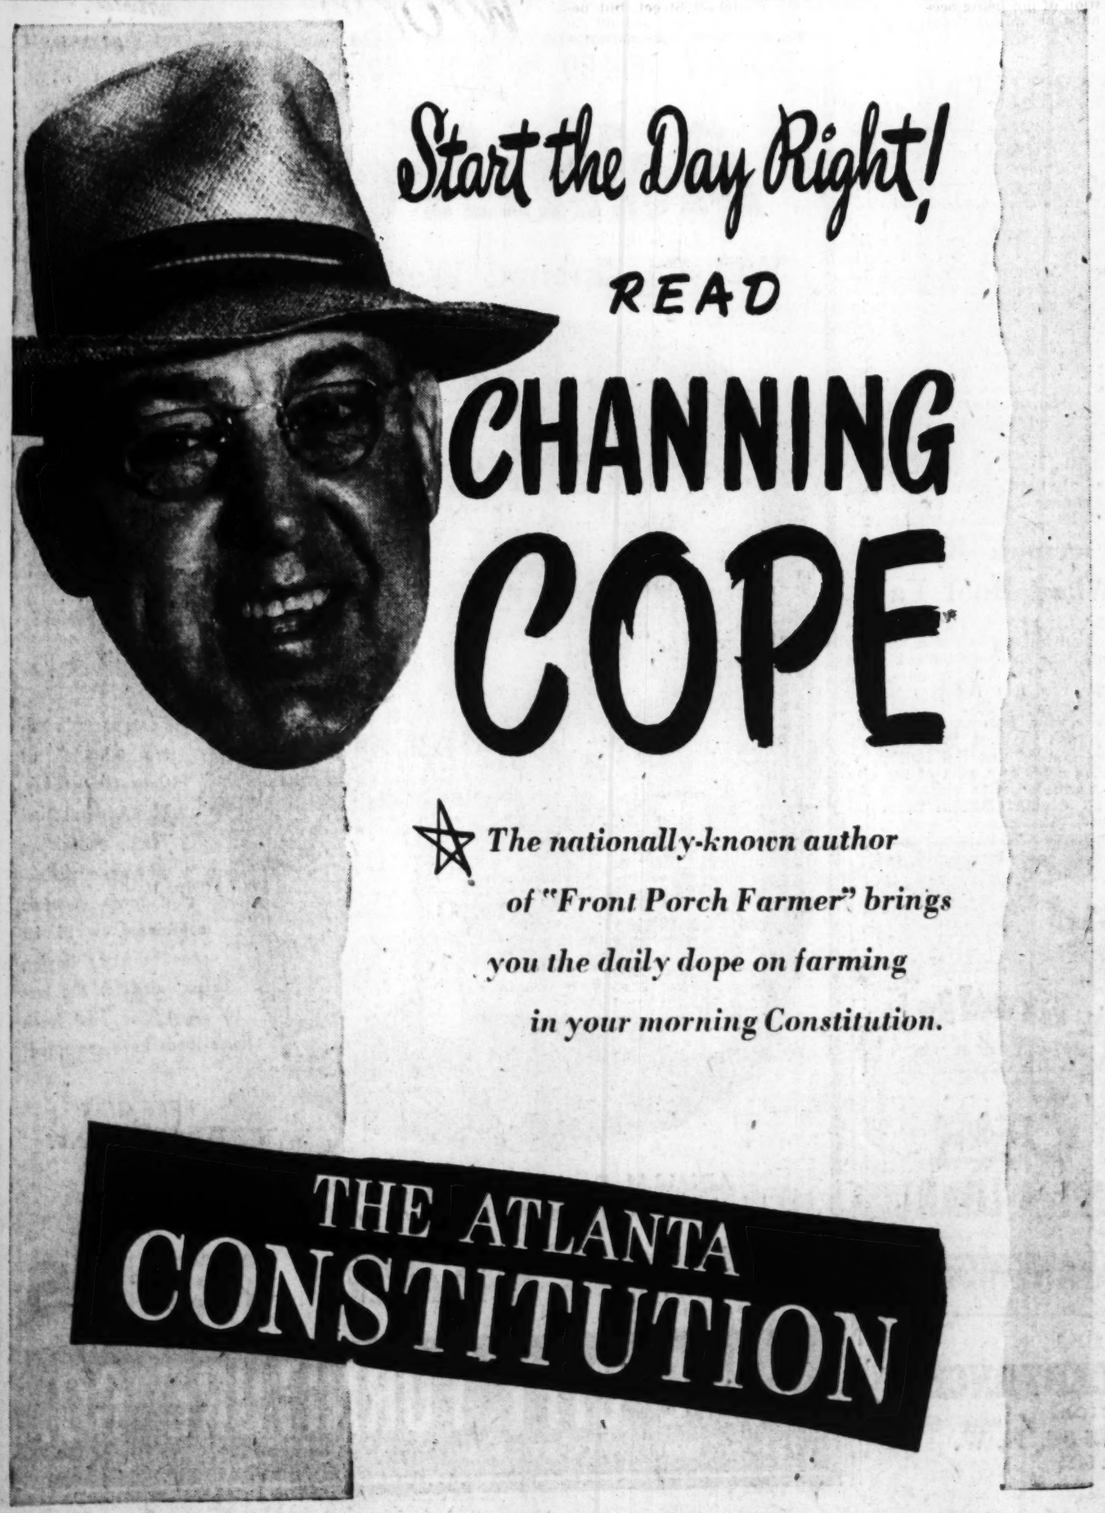

To make her Southern introduction complete, Miss Bates posed for a picture beside a bale of cotton which helps to give the airport waiting room its Dixie flavor.

Actual shooting on "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain" will begin this morning—in a gymnasium if it's raining and in the wide open spaces if the elements co-operate.

Political Party Guide Aims at Better Policy

Draft Proposes 50-Man Councils To Advise on National Targets

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON—A committee of the American Political Science Association circulated yesterday a draft report suggesting that the Republican and Democratic Parties hold national conventions at least once every two years and take other steps to give more responsible policy leadership to their own members and to the public as a whole.

The draft report, which still is subject to approval by the full "Committee on Political Parties" and by the APSA as a whole, warns that "the American party system, as it operates today, falls short of meeting the requirements of a critical era."

"A chance that the electorate will turn its back upon the two parties is by no means academic," the report stated. "As a matter of fact, the turn has already occurred in considerable part, and it is still going on. Present conditions are a great incentive for the voters to dispose of the parties as intermediaries' between themselves and government."

Suggesting reforms within the framework of the present party system so as to give greater policy leadership, the tentative report suggests creation by both the Republicans and the Democrats of a separate "party council" of 50 members, with five members from the national committee, five from each House of Congress, 10 from the State committees, five Governors, and 20 chosen at large, including representation for the Young Republicans or the Young Democrats. It gives this outline of duties for such groups:

"Such a party council should consider and settle the larger problems of party management, within limits prescribed by the national convention; propose a preliminary draft of the party platform to the national convention; interpret the platform in relation to current problems; choose for the national convention the group of party leaders outside the party organizations; consider and make recommendations to the appropriate party organs in respect to Congressional candidates; and make recommendations to the national convention, the national committee, or other appropriate party organs with respect to conspicuous departures from general party decisions. . . .

"In Presidential years, the Council . . . might well perform the useful functions of screening Presidential candidacies in a preliminary way."

In suggesting that the parties hold national conventions bi-ennially instead of quadrennially as at present, the group also criticized the present unwieldy size of the national gatherings and proposed that future conventions be limited to 500 to 600 members, composed of approximately 350 delegates elected directly by party voters on a more representative basis, another approximately 150 ex-officio members chosen from the national committee, State party chairmen and Congressional leaders, and a selected group of approximately 25 prominent party leaders outside the party organizations. This is a modification of a plan proposed to Congress by President Wilson in 1913, when he also advocated a national primary to select Presidential nominees.

The group also endorsed as a step "in the direction of an effective two-party system" the Lodge-Gossett amendment to change the present electoral college system, which has passed the Senate and is blocked in the House rules committee.

Doyal Asks Re-election On Record

"A record of constructive service is a more reliable basis for choosing public officials than all the promises in the world." So stated R. L. "Shorty" Doyal, candidate for re-election as Fulton County Commissioner in the Democratic Primary on June 28, as he opened his campaign this week.

DOYAL

For many years one of the leading figures in Atlanta and Fulton County athletic activities, "Shorty" Doyal is now head football coach at Marist. Prior to his association with Marist, he served for an extended period as football coach at Boys' High in Atlanta.

"Shorty" Doyal was first elected to the Fulton County Commission in 1946 by a substantial majority over his opponent. He campaigned on a platform of "good government for all—with special concern for the recreational needs of Atlanta and Fulton County young people." He is running on the same simple platform again this year. "I will make no sweeping promises that cannot be fulfilled. I will simply express a sincere determination to serve your interests well. I offer my past record of service in support of this pledge."

During Doyal's term of office numerous substantial improvements have been realized in Fulton County. Nineteen new health centers have been established; 11 recreation centers have been developed, and two fire stations built. Street lighting has been improved; five new swimming pools have been constructed; golf courses have been improved. Roads have been paved; parks have been beautified; diversified recreational programs have been organized on a broad scale. Doyal was also one of those instrumental in bringing to Atlanta the $10,000 North Fulton Golf Tournament and the Havatlanta Swimming Meet.

"Shorty" Doyal is a native of Atlanta. He is a Marine veteran of World War I. He is active in church, community and civic enterprises including: Honorary member of the Four and Eight; a member of the American Legion, First Presbyterian Church, Atlanta Touchdown Club, Buckhead Fifty Club, Shrine, a Scottish Rite Mason, member of Kiwanis Club, Exchange Club, Buckhead Elks, and a life member of the Atlanta PTA.

Klan-Fighting Editor Indorses Thompson

By M. L. ST. JOHN

A Klan-fighting country editor is indorsing Gubernatorial Candidate M. E. Thompson, and a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor is warning Georgians to take legal action to keep fro mbeing disfranchised as State political campaigns enter their fourth week today.

Miss Amelia Knoedler, Editor of The Unadilla Observer who has been crusading against the Klan in her section, will speak for Thompson over WSB at 6:45 tomorrow night. Thompson will speak in Unadilla Wednesday night on "Law and Order."

Dan Duke, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, issued a statement last night warning that thousands of Georgians qualified to vote will be denied the right unless they take legal action now. He said the "manipulation of election machinery and tampering with the voter qualification laws created such confusion" that some counties now lack a voting list. In some counties, hundreds of qualified voters have been dropped arbitrarily, Duke said.

"If you voted in the last general election or primary and your name is not now on the list; if you have registered since then and your name is not on the list," Duke continued, "communicate with me and proper legal action will be taken against those responsible."

Gov. Talmadge and Gubernatorial Candidate Thompson invade each other's territories this week.

Thompson takes off today on a swing through Middle Georgia, speaking in only one county that he carried in 1948 and about a dozen that he lost to Talmadge. He speaks in Talmadge's home county of Henry today—speaking at McDonough at 3 p. m. and Hampton at 5 p. m., and then goes to Griffin at 8 p. m. (Thompson carried Spalding County, Griffin, in 1948.)

Talmadge plans a rally in the Seventh Congressional District, Thompson's strong area, Saturday. He will speak at Summerville at 3:30 p. m. Preceding that, Talmadge will give a political speech Friday afternoon at Lawrenceville, scene of perhaps his biggest political rally in 1948. All this week, the Governor will be delivering commencement addresses at high schools.

Talmadge spoke to some 2,500 persons at Thomaston Saturday, while Thompson addressed about 500 at Cedartown. The Governor talked to 1,000 at Greensboro Friday, while Thompson spoke to nearly 400 at Cartersville. Address ing erowds ranging from 25 to 500 four and five times a day, however, Thompson talked to some 5,000 persons during the week, while Talmadge talked to 3,500 in his two rallies.

Whitman Asks Re-election To Bench

Judge George P. Whitman, of Atlanta, now serving as one of the judges of Fulton County Superior Court, is seeking an endorsement term.

Judge Whitman

Judge Whitman is a long-time resident of Atlanta, with a distinguished career as lawyer and public official.

Commenting on his candidacy, Judge Whitman said, "The office of Judge of Superior Court is one of the most important within the gift of the people because the liberty and property rights of citizens so often depend upon the rulings of the court. All my efforts have been directed toward the preservation and promotion of justice. On the basis of my past experience and record, I ask and will appreciate the support of the voters of Fulton County."

Judge Whitman has established a reputation for dignity, fairness and efficiency in his court, and is recognized as one of Georgia's most qualified jurists.

Judge Whitman attended public schools in Newnan and Atlanta, and graduated from the University of Georgia Law School with highest honors. He won recognition as a member of the debating team at the University, and is a member of the Sphinx honorary society on the campus. Later the Judge attended Yale and was graduated from the Law School there in 1907.

After completing his academic training, the Judge was a writer and editor for a publisher of law books. He resigned this position in 1911 to practice law in Atlanta. Judge Whitman served for 20 years as city attorney of College Park and was President of the Fulton County Board of Education.

Judge Whitman is married to the former Miss Kate Fuller, of College Park. They have three children: George P. Whitman, Jr., division manager of a national corporation; Dr. O. F. Whitman, Regional Director of the State Board of Health with offices in Albany, and a daughter, Mrs. W. Ross Stromberg, of Orlando, Fla.

For many years, Judge Whitman has served as chairman of the Board of Deacons of the Tabernacle Baptist Church. He was general attorney for the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. As a Sunday School teacher, thousands have heard him in churches throughout the Atlanta area.

Judge Whitman is Past Master of College Park Lodge No. 454; Past President of the fifth Masonic District Convention and of the Masonic Service Association of Fulton and DeKalb Counties. He is a Thirty-third degree Mason.

Girl, 10, Is Assaulted After Abduction of Two

By HOWELL JONES

Kidnaped as they walked toward their Sunday school class, two small girls yesterday were taken for a "terror" ride to Ellenwood where one of the children was criminally assaulted.

Police said the girls, one of them 10 and the other 7, returned to their homes about 1:30 p. m., weary from a long walk from Grant Park where their abductor made them get out of the car.

The children told their parents and police a harrowing experience with a "dark curly-haired man" who, they said, forced them into his "dirty" automobile at the point of a knife.

The 10-year-old girl was treated at Grady Hospital for painful injuries. Grady Hospital physicians said there was no doubt the child had been attacked.

Dets. J. M. Pack and J. W. Ellington said the children told of being accosted by a white man as they walked toward their church about 9:30 a. m. The man told them to get into the car and brandished a knife when the girls refused.

The police quoted the children as saying the man drove out Capitol Avenue, S. E.-S. W. to Grant Park, then on to the Federal Prison. From there he drove down Highway 42 to Ellenwood in Clayton County and turned off into a dirt road. After driving about two miles down the unimproved road, the account continued, the man turned the car around, drove back about a quarter mile, then stopped his car.

Pack and Ellington said the man ordered the seven-year-old child to "get into the back seat and don't look."

After assaulting the oldest child, the man brought the two back to Grant Park and ordered them out of the car, police were told.

Pack and Ellington said an investigation at the scene of the crime produced sufficient evidence to substantiate the children's story.

Meanwhile, Fulton County police reported an attempt assault on a 12-year-old Woodstock girl near Sandy Plains, north of Atlanta. Complete details of the alleged attack were not immediately available but Fulton detectives said the attempted assault took place near Ebenezer Church.

The dead man was tentatively identified as Jack Miller. Critically injured was Bill Bottini.

The downtown area of the city was crowded with visitors to the Saint Raphael Mission fiesta parade.

Truman Fight On T-H Faces Congress By-Pass

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A two-party agreement to curtail the legislative program and let Congress go home early in August is under discussion by leaders.

Sen. Taft, of Ohio, Chairman of the GOP policy committee, told a reporter yesterday he hopes some agreement can be reached between Republicans and Democrats soon on what major issues will be dealt with before this session ends.

Taft said Sen. Lucas, of Illinois, the Democratic leader, had suggested he would be willing to talk the matter over with the Republicans.

If the program is narrowed, some of President Truman's "Fair Deal" proposals are not likely to see any action in this session. Because it is election year a Mid-summer adjournment ahead of the Fall campaign has been the target all along.

Truman proposals likely to be by-passed, among others, include the Brannan farm plan, compulsory health insurance and Taft-Hartley repeal. However, these never had much chance in the curtailed session anyway. The Senate already has indicated clearly that it plans to shelve a Fair Employment Practices Commission bill Lucas has been trying to get up.

Meanwhile, the Senate threatened to throw out some more of the President's reorganization plans before tomorrow night when those which escape become law automatically.

Five or more come up for Senate consideration today and tomorrow. Any one can be killed by a full majority of either House or Senate.

Six of the 21 plans submitted last March have reached a Senate vote. Five were defeated by lopsided tallies.

Except for one, the rejected plans were built on specific Government reform proposals of the 12-member, bipartisan commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover.

President Truman has been pressing for action on a Senate-approved aid-to-education bill now bogged down in the House, an extension of rent controls, expansion of unemployment benefits and renewal of the military draft.

Congress may pass finally on the draft and rent control issues but the outlook for the others is not bright.

Mr. Truman also has been asking for congressional approval of the International Trade Organization charter. Republicans have served notice they will fight it vigorously. If the Administration brings it up, leaders may have to say goodbye to August quitting plans.

Democrats and Republicans seem agreed that at least four major issues ought to be disposed of before adjournment.

These include (1) the $29,000,000,000 omnibus appropriations measure carrying funds to finance the Government in the year beginning July 1, (2) a second year's authorization and appropriation for foreign arms aid, (3) expansion of Social Security coverage, and (4) some reduction in excise taxes.

Congress probably will clear this week a $3,121,450,000 foreign economic aid authorization, first measure of world importance to go to the White House since Congress convened in January, nearly five months ago. The actual cash for the main part of it still must be appropriated. The President now has on his desk a big rivers and harbors authorization measure.

Senate action on the omnibus appropriations bill is likely to bring on a new fight to cut spending beyond the $1,000,000,000 plus shaved off the President's estimates by the House.

Reds Open Arms Route In Cambodia, French Say

3,000 Communists Insure Passage Of Weapons Smuggled From Siam

PNOMPENH, Indo-China—(AP)—Official French sources reported yesterday Communist troops of Ho Chi-minh had infiltrated the Southern Indo-China State of Cambodia and opened a corridor to Thailand (Siam) to obtain smuggled arms.

Cambodia, of which Pnompenh is the capital, is one of three Indo-China States which obtained internal autonomy within the French union last year and have been recognized by the United States and other Western Powers.

The others are Viet Nam and Laos. Viet Nam has 21,000,000 population, compared with 3,500,000 in Cambodia and about 1,000,000 in Laos.

Ho Chi-minh's Communist Organization of Vietminh calls itself the "Republic of Viet Nam" and has been recognized by Communist China, Russia and satellites.

Ho is engaged in a protracted war with the French-sponsored Viet Nam. (Use of the name "Viet Nam" by both sides helps to confuse the situation.)

Cambodia and Laos, in the south and west, have been relatively quiet.

Now, however, French military quarters estimate that about 3,000 of Ho's Communists have trickled over the north border of Cambodia and occupied a broad zone. They are said to have opened overland routes to Thailand through the coastal region fronting on the Gulf of Siam.

Pedal Barometers Foretell Weather

WASHINGTON—(AP) — The belief of many persons that they can predict weather changes by the way their feet feel is more than superstition, a National Association of Chiropodists official said yesterday.

"Feet, particularly in tight shoes, are sensitive to changes in atmospheric pressure and a painful corn can quickly indicate changes in barometric pressure," said the Association's Executive Secretary, Dr. William J. Stickel.

He issued a statement in connection with Foot Health Week, May 20-27.

Labor Party Moderates in Britain

By TANIA LONG
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

LONDON — The various elements that make up the Labor Party agreed yesterday to present the British electorate with a "moderate" policy at the next election.

This bacame known at the end of the two-day deliberations of Labor Party leaders who met Saturday behind the barred gates of a country house in Surrey to shape their political program for the time when they once again must go to the people.

In a closely-divided House of Commons such as the present one there always is the possibility of a sudden government defeat and another general election. Labor leaders are understood to have impressed their National Executive with the need for speed in drafting the program. The first meeting of this body which will work out the party platform on the basis of the secret discussions held this weekend will take place Wednesday.

The approval of a policy of moderation rather than of intensified radicalism is held to be a triumph for Party Leaders Herbert Morrison and Clement R. Attlee, who interpreted the results of the last election, when Labor's strength was sharply cut, to a popular demand for a halt of further nationalization.

The new program is not expected to contain any shocks or controversial planks although it is likely Labor will put into operation the act, already passed, for the nationalization of the iron and steel industry.

In all other respects Labor's next election program, it is understood, will be a "popular" one calculated to win back much of the middle-class vote that was lot in February.

Ali Baba Fliers Ferry Iraqi Jews to Israel

By GENE CURRIVAN
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

TEL AVIV—Operation Ali Baba which will transport an estimated 100,000 Iraqi Jews to Israel is now in full swing.

The first plane loads arrived Saturday but a strict Israeli censorship has been clamped on the project.

It was feared that if the operation received too much publicity the Iraqi government might feel embarrassment and call a halt to the exodus. But when the operation was disclosed in Baghdad and Cypress the ban was lifted. Although there has been a cessation of hostilities Iraq and Israel are still technically at war.

Under a plan approved by the Iraqi Parliament, Jews who wish to leave the country may do so after relinquishing their nationality. They are not permitted to go directly to Israel and for this reason planes carrying them must set down at Nicosia on Cyprus which ostensibly is their destination. When this technicality is complied with Iraq's moral responsibility ceases and the refugees move along the second leg of their journey to Israel.

In this devious manner it is planned to bring all those who wish to come within a year. Some 46,000 already have registered.

The last mass exodus from Iraq was almost 2,500 years ago when King Cyrus of the Persians freed Jews who had been exiled from Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. At that time, according to Biblical accounts, 42,360 members of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and Levi chose to return. They journeyed on foot or by camel and donkey.

This time Iraqi's Jews are travelling in four-engined Skymasters of the Near East Airlines which also provided transport for the Yemenite Jews from Aden.

Up to now those who wished to leave Iraq had to do it by surreptitiously crossing the border into Iran.

The Government here will be sorely taxed with this latest influx as it now has more than 90,000 immigrants in camps.

Iraquis who have arrived on the first flights are obviously of the poorer class. Like all others who will come they were permitted but 60 pounds of baggage and nothing else. They cannot bring with them any currency and must leave behind all jewelry.

Any monies they have acquired from liquidating their estates must also stay where it is until peace is declared or they can retrieve it from those in whose custody it was left. It is believed that wealthier Jews will not attempt to join the exodus until their security has been established.

The Near East Airlines is headed by Robert Prescott of "Flying Tiger" fame. Many of his pilots are former Tigers with American backgrounds.

Rolls Royce Sale Is Political Move

TOKYO — (AP) — Premier Shigeru Yoshida's aged Rolls Royce is for sale, for political reasons.

Sale of the 20-year-old limousine was offered on the bulletin board of Yoshida's Liberal Party headquarters yesterday for an unspecified price.

Yoshida's possession of the car, one of the few of its kind in Japan, has been criticized repeatedly by the opposition.

Realism Personified

BIRMINGHAM—Hollywood, where were you? You in your search for realism sat serenely in the middle of Los Angeles Saturday afternoon while the University of Alabama and associated happy souls realismed all over Legion Field under Vulcan's nose.

I have seen football coaches hoisted to the shoulders of joyously raving players and students after victory. Same for basketball coaches. And in a lot of cases I have felt that the coach should have been carrying his squadsmen off the field one by one.

Track and I haven't traveled in the same company very much. So when the gladsome Alabama students picked up gray-haired Tom Lieb and toted him down the track Saturday afternoon, I was seeing a personal first. Never before have I witnessed a track coach being carried away for winning anything.

That wasn't all. The muscular celebrators were quite throaty, too. For, as they swept down the cinders under the Lieb load, they blended their voices in a short chorus of what must be the Crimson Tide alma mammy. Real drammy, folks. Frank Merrwiell stuff with a Dixieland beat.

In the case of Alabama, however, genuine joy was legal. Tuscaloosa has grown accustomed to seeing champions come home in every other sport, and kings from the Rose Bowl. This success, while it won't bust the school's money belt, is worth a fancy price in significance. The Crimson broke a hammerlock LSU, Georgia and Georgia Tech have held on to the Southeastern's track empire during the 18 years of its existence.

While Alabama's was a collective celebration, a Tulane man should have been given downtown Birmingham for a one-man parade when it was all over. Wouldn't have taken more than a few minutes, if this individual had operated in the business section as he did in the stadium section. At Legion Field, Paul Bienz, the pfft-pfft boy from Tulane, completed a three-year parade through the SEC dash section.

His nine 100 and 200-yard-dash titles never have been, and probably never will be, equalled in the league. He is the first double-truck champ of three years' standing.

Grid Prospect This is the product of a rather unusual situation. Paul came to Tulane out of Ft. Wayne, Ind., not as a track man, but on a football scholarship. His chief football talent was an ability to turn on the petrol and run away from most any citizen who wore a college grid uniform. His frame is not built for speed, but durability. He's short-legged and dumpy for a sprinter, always runs behind a pair of thick-lensed spectacles.

"I always have to train down for the track season," he says. "I usually weigh about 170 for football, but I'll weigh about 156 now. Track is much harder on me than football, more demanding, much more conditioning. There's a lot more to it than just getting out on a track and running."

A comrade sprinter would have sounded a loud "amen" to Bienz's observation. This man comes from up the creek at Baton Rouge. Name is Jack Bourgeois. While prancing around loosening up his limbs after the Friday flood, a manly contestant pitched the shot on Bourgeois' foot.

Bourgeois turned up with a painfully sore hoof Saturday, but still attempted to run the 220. This man from LSU would not have rewritten the finish, but it is quite possible that his accident cost the Tigers some priceless points in the end, for Bourgeois had run well Friday before the ache set in.

There are hidden dangers in this pastime, anyhow, and no one is more qualified to elaborate on them than Al Moreau, the LSU coach and the 1933 low-hurdles champ. Two years ago, Moreau brought to Birmingham Bob Lowther, the pole-vaulting champion of two years' standing. The pole vault pit was set up on the south side of the stadium near a light pole. As Lowther went over the crossbar, a foot struck the light pole and he broke a leg.

Double Tragedy This was a double tragedy to Lowther, for he was one of the country's leading decathlon prospects for the then upcoming Olympics.

Last year, Moreau brought Bob's brother, Buddy, to the SEC meet as LSU's pole-vaulting representative. The pit had been moved across the field this time, but still near a light pole. As Buddy came up for a jump, he struck that pole and the Lowther family had its second broken leg in two years of SEC track. That's a record for which there'll be no contest.

The hammer-throw was deleted from field events in the United States after several tragedies involving the unwieldy instrument, which left a long string of slain spectators in its path. There was a wild campaign to dispense with the javelin-throw a few years ago, but a sufficiently strong case was never brought against it. However, out in the Midwest just a few weeks back, a great high school athlete was speared in the temple by a javelin. He lived, for the spear ranged downward and lodged at the base of his brain, but his career as an athlete is done.

Almost a mummy at this meet was Hurdler Walter Mitchell, of Georgia. He had taken a severe spill during the week, and his scarred back was swathed in an adhesive plaster as he made his race for the Red and Black.

Hidden perils by the score. You may not get it in competition, but keep a wary eye open between events, friend contestant. One should never trust the shot, the javelin or the discus, even in the hands of champions.

DIMAGGIO'S DAY—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees' centerfielder, practically won the first game of yesterday's doubleheader with Cleveland. He blasted two homers and a double driving in six runs. Left, Joe is crossing the plate in the second inning after clouting a grand slam homer. He is shaking hands with Catcher Yogi Berra. Right, Joe is shown hitting his second home run in the fifth inning. The Cleveland catcher is Ray Murray, the umpire, John Stevens. New York won two.

DiMag Hits 2 Homers, One With Bases Full

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The big bats of the New York Yankees boomed out a total of 34 hits yesterday as the New Yorkers twice defeated the Cleveland Indians, 14-5 and 12-4, before 79,570 fans. Joe DiMaggio had two homers and a double in the opening clash and drove in six runs.

The crowd was third largest ever to see an American League game. Cleveland and Philadelphia drew 82,781 here on June 20, 1948, for the record and 81,841 saw New York and Boston play in New York on May 30, 1938.

The victory was the sixth straight for the First Place Yankees and it gave them a 2½-game margin over the Detroit Tigers.

In the opener, the Bombers got behind Ed Lopat's nine-hit hurling to pound 15 safeties off four Indian hurlers. Di Maggio hit a grand-slam homer in the second frame and connected for another circuit-clout in the fifth with none on. He was credited with driving in another run in the sixth when he was walked with the bases loaded.

MacPherson, Lindquist Stymie Barons, 4-2, 3-0

By JESSE OUTLAR
Constitution Sports Writer

RICKWOOD PARK, BIRMINGHAM, Alla.—Birmingham Mgr. Mike Higgins picked Atlanta as the team to beat in the pennant race yesterday, so the Crackers expressed their appreciation for the compliment by dumping the Barons in both ends of a double-header, 4-2 and 3-0.

The twin-triumph enabled the red-hot Crackers, who have won six of their last seven games, to stretch their league lead to two full games.

Harry MacPherson fashioned a five-hitter in the opener and Ebba St. Claire snapped out of a two-game slump by blasting his ninth homer, a double and single to drive in half of the Atlanta runs. Hank Ertman also hit for the circuit in the lid-lifter, his sixth of the season.

Although there were several standouts, the real star of the afternoon was Carl Lindquist who turned in a masterful three-hit shutout in the seven-inning after piece.

In posting his third victory of the season, Carl bested Ray Yochim, who relieved Bobby Brake in the first with none out and yielded only two safeties.

The Crackers started run-making activities in the second inning of the first game when, with one away, Ertman drilled a single. Hank stole second and romped home when St. Claire slammed a double. Saint moved to second on a passed ball and counted as Al Aucoin slapped a one-baser.

MacPherson, who recorded his fourth success of the campaign, was in serious trouble in the third, but escaped with only one-run damage.

Red Mathis walked and Pitcher Ralph Holmes whiffed. Joe Demaestri followed with a single and Lou Damman lived on Ed Mathews' miscue. After Fred Hatfield whiffed, MacPherson signed a pass for Bob Dipietro to force Mathis over. But with the chips down, Mac fanned Husky Norm Zauchin to end the threat.

Meanwhile, Holmes, a promising right-hander with four previous victories, baffled the Crackers until the seventh. In that inning Ertman parked his homer on the roof in right.

The other Cracker run came in the ninth when St. Claire put one over the right-field signs.

Keeping up the homerun tempo, Dick Burgett socked a MacPherson pitch into the left field stands in the Baron half of the ninth.

Brake, who has failed to finish in five of his six starts this year, started the night cap for Birmingham and was greeted with a three-run volley in the first.

Gene Verble and Bob Thorpe unloaded singles and Country Brown was safe at first on a bunt when a play for Verble failed at third. Higgins decided Brake had enough after Mathews singled across Verble and brought on Yochim.

Ray induced Ertman and St. Claire to bounce into force outs, with Thorpe and Brown scoring on the put outs.

Thereafter, only four Crackers touched first as Yochim slammed the door. That three-run cushion was all Lindquist needed, for he never allowed two Barons on the sacks in any single frame.

Demaestri singled to open the Birmingham half of the first; Karl Olson got a one-baser in the second and Yochim singled in the third for the only licks off Lindquist. He walked Burgett in the seventh, but not a runner reached second.

The faltering Barons have now dropped five of their last six games, two of which were shut outs.

SHORT NOTES — Al Henencheck, seeking his sixth straight victory, will hurl the final game of the series tonight for the Crackers. Southpaw Leo Kiely, who has broken even in two starts against Atlanta, is Mike Higgins' choice for the Barons. . . . Mrs. Dixie Walker is a regular fan when the Crackers are in town, but yesterday was the first time that seven-year-old daughter Susan ever saw a game. . . . When Dick Littlefield shut out the Crackers Saturday night, he became the first pitcher to beat them twice this season.

Sain Racks Up Sixth Victory

BOSTON—(AP)—The Boston Braves twice measured the Chicago Cubs yesterday, Johnny Sain winning his sixth of the season, 3-2, in the opener, and Vern Bickford registered his second pitching decision, 4-3, in the closer which ended with Earl Torgeson catching Pinch Hitter Bob Scheffing's foul ball by stretching into a front-row box.

A paid audience of 18,048 witnessed the wind-swept twin bill.

Sain was aided by Walker Cooper's two-run homer in the sixth inning when the Tribe scored all its runs of that game.

When the Cubs scored once in the seventh of the opener it ended a scoreless streak of 24 innings for Sain. The other Cub tally was veteran Phil Cavarretta's first homer of the season.

The Braves were forced to come from behind to pull out the second game as the Cubs landed on Bickford for two runs in the opening inning and added their third in the sixth when the Braves manufactured their second tally.

Cards Pull Triple Play In Dividing With Phils

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — Andy Seminick clouted a ninth-inning homer with Dick Sisler on base to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the second game of a double-header yesterday. The Cards executed a triple-play and staved off a late-inning Phils' rally to win the opener, 6-5. The split enabled the second-place Phillies to climb within a half-game of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Bums' Winning Streak Snapped at Six Games

BROOKLYN — (AP) — Home runs by Virgil Stallcup, Johnny Wyrostek, Grady Hatton and Danny Litwhiler sparked the Cincinnati Reds to a 10-9 triumph over the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday. Litwhiler belted his as a pinch-hitter with two on in the eighth inning to win the game. Herm Wehmeier staggered all the way for the Reds.

The victory ended Brooklyn's six-game winning streak and Cincinnati's six-game losing streak.

Wehmeier, who went the distance although he allowed 10 hits and walked nine batters in the three-hour and 30-minute fray, got Roy Campanella to end the game with a pop fly after Bill Cox singled to put the tying run on base.

George May Sign With Wake Forest

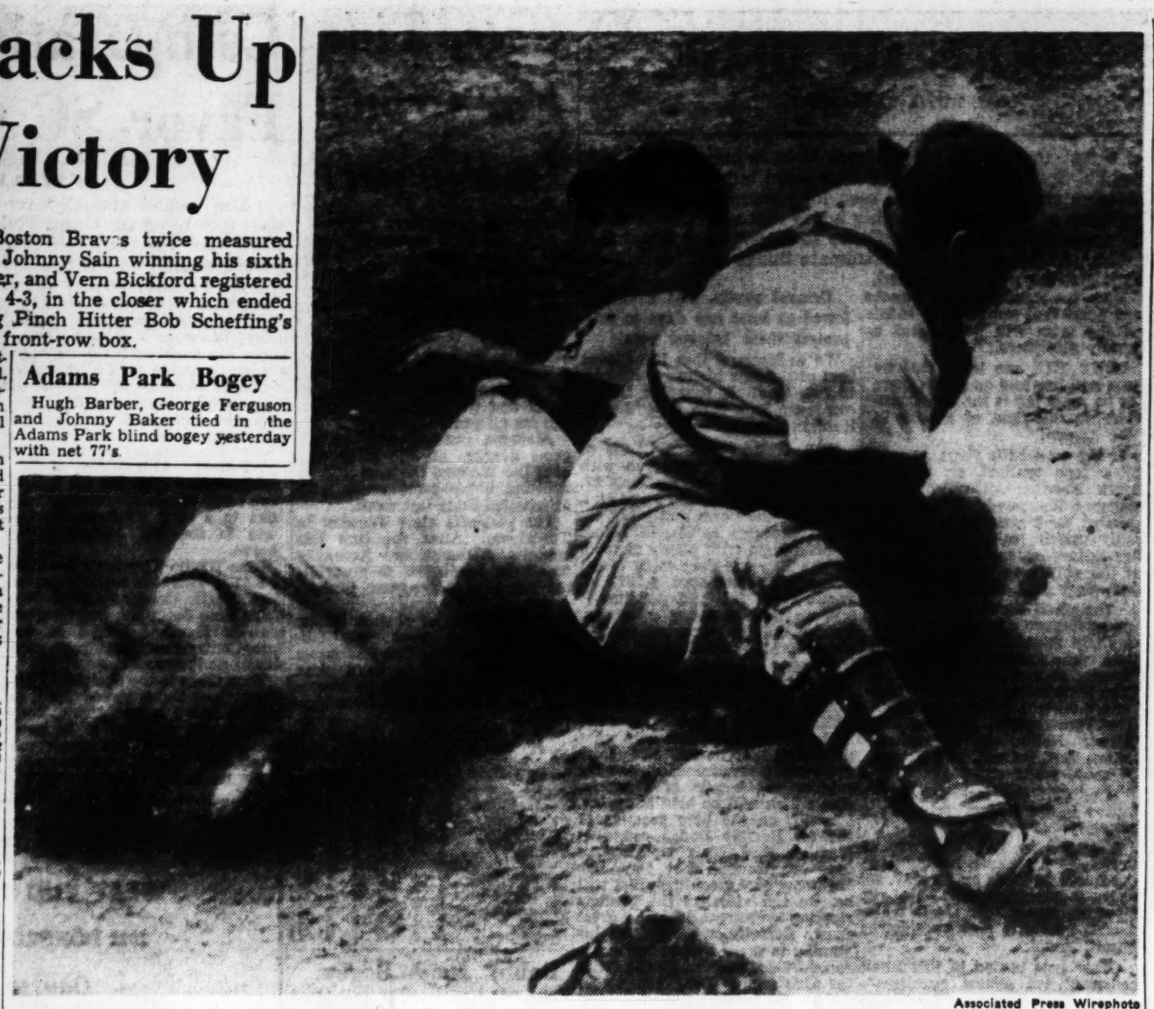

BRUNSWICK — Sonny George, star fullback of the 1949 South Georgia championship Class AA Glynn Academy football team, will sign a grant-in-aid with Wake Forest, of the Southern Conference, within the next few days, according to reports.

George, an All-Southern and All-State selection, is among Georgia's most sought-after young gridders. He is expected to play both football and golf at the Baptist institution, where D. C. (Peahead) Walker is head coach.

Practically every major college in the South reportedly has been seeking to sign George, who was a guest of Wake Forest officials over the weekend.

ADAMS SCORES—Herb Adams, left, Chicago White Sox outfielder, scores from third base in the first inning of the second game with Boston at Comiskey Park yesterday. Buddy Rosar, Red Sox catcher, topples backward attempting to make the putout. Play came when Dave Philley hit a slow roller to Joe Dobson, Boston pitcher, who threw to the plate. The two divided the double-header, Boston winning the first and losing the second.

Paul Bryant Believes His 'Cats Will Win SEC

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(AP)—"Kentucky win the Southeastern Conference football championship year? Why not?"

That was the reaction of Coach Paul Bryant yesterday to the announcement of a Birmingham newspaper's poll of the conference coaches to choose the favorite for this Fall's race.

They picked Kentucky by a whisker over Tennessee, Louisiana State, Alabama and Georgia Tech.

"I am just a little bit surprised that the word got out," Bryant chuckled yesterday.

"Sure, that is just exactly what we have been figuring on—winning the championship, I mean. The boys and I have been talking it over this Spring and we have decided to go after the title.

"The thing about it is that we thought it was our own secret. The boys told me they wanted to win and I have enough confidence in them to believe they will do just that."

Pels Shellack Mobile, 19-1

Nashville Keeps Chicks Out of Second With Split

By EDWIN POPE
United Press Sports Writer

The New Orleans Pelicans lent the Atlanta Crackers a powerful helping hand yesterday by shellacking Mobile 19 to 1 in the first game of a scheduled doubleheader. Rain forced postponement of the nightcap.

The Pelicans spread their thunderous offense over six innings, including an eight-run eighth frame. Righthander Vernon Law sailed along on a seven-hitter to rack up his third victory after four setbacks.

The Pels picked a notable victim—Marion Fricano, who carried a 4-1 mark into the affair. Johnny Merson slammed a home run for New Orleans in that wild eighth.

The Nashville Vols prevented Memphis from supplanting Mobile in second place by splitting with the Chicks.

Leonardo Goicoechea's sixth pitching victory, a sweet seven-hitter, plus a three-run circuit drive by Outfielder Bill Wilson in the eighth, derricked the Chicks to an opening 5-1 decision.

But Nashville recouped by the same score in reverse as Jim Atchley stifled the Chicks on five hits. Johnny Perkovich bore the abbreviated loss, giving siv safeties.

Chattanooga and Little Rock split two narrow decisions.

The Lookouts captured the 30-hit opener, 10-9, on a four-run ninth-inning and despite late homers by Travs Kenny Humphrey and Jack Sanford. Al Flair and Bob Reid had homered earlier for 'Nooga.

Babe Wins Top Prize Of $5,000

Louise Suggs Picks Up $750

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—(AP). Babe Didrikson Zaharias, carding a 78 for a 144-hole total of 629, yesterday won the $5,000 first prize in the Weathervane Women's Cross Country Open golf championship, edging out Louise Suggs by three strokes.

Miss Suggs matched the Babe's two-under-par 78 yesterday and her two-day total of 155 was good for the $750 first prize for the 36-hole competition over the Knollwood Country Club course here. Miss Suggs' overall winnings in the weathervane were $2,200.

Mrs. Zaharias also won $450 by finishing second in the 36-hole Knollwood competition, bringing her total winnings for the tour which started at Pebble Beach, Cal., April 29 to $7,450. She was low scorer for the 36 holes at Pebble Beach and at Cleveland and second low at Prairie View, Illinois.

Only six players were eligible for the $5.000 grand prize when the final 36 holes of competition started Saturday, and Miss Suggs was the only threat to Mrs. Zaharias.

Patty Berg, with an 81, finished in third place in the 144-hole competition with 647, followed by Betty Jameson, whose 83 gave her a total of 665; Alice Bauer, with a 79 for 668, and Bettye Mims Danoff, with an 83 for the final round and 678 total.

The $3,000 in prize money for the 36 holes played at Knollwood was split among the 11 pros. Marlene Bauer and Patty Berg tied for third place at 162 and each received $300. Alice Bauer won $225 for her 165 total. Shirley Spork $200 for her 166.

DOGS OF DIXIE

By RUTH STANTON COGILL

Great throngs of people have been wandering through the old Speer Castle on Peachtree Road buying trinkets or massive antiques that have seen long years and use in the mansion of yesteryear. The big house that was moved stone by stone from downtown Atlanta so many years ago, must make way for progress. If inanimate things could talk, perhaps distress would be voiced.

Even the sightless marble ducks and geese that appeared to toddle on the lawn will toddle just as blindly elsewhere.

BUT THE one thing that no one will buy and on which there is no price tag is the Pet Cemetery to the right of a path in the garden.

It lies on a little slope, guarded by a lone sentinel, an artificial heron standing knee deep in a stagnant lily pond. The heron's cracked neck gives it a wise and sadly rakish look. No doubt it has witnessed many burial rites of the only love that money can buy—dogs and other pets.

The small cemetery is ragged and overgrown but many markers still remain. There are the two white Collies, Beautiful and Lassie, at rest on the hillside. The Manchester terriers, Bulgey and Snowball, lie near by as do the Pomeranians, Princess and Mimi; Nellie, a Chihuahua; Black Joe, the cat, and Frosty, a snow white cat.

Mimi was the last dog to be buried in the Speers' private pet cemetery.

She died in 1946 and was as French as her name, having been purchased in Paris by Mrs. W. M. Ryon, a granddaughter, as a gift for Mrs. Speer. A small white marble hen with pink eyes marks Mimi's grave.

Other pets buried in this small cemetery are almost countless—parrots, love birds, canaries and parakeets were accorded equal ceremony as one by one they passed on. Even the tiniest bird was buried in a baby casket.

Cement vaults, that were allowed at least two days to set, protect these beloved pets.

We understand that the Clover Leaf of the new highway will cover this spot. A four-leaf Clover can mean luck even in a "Happy Hunting Ground."

THE GREAT DANE CLUB of the Mid-South is coming up with another Sanction Match May 27. Winship Nunnally, President, passes on the news that a big entry is expected as it will be an outdoor event with plenty of room for the Danes if they deign to get frisky. The show spot is 1311 W. Pace's Ferry Rd., and the time is 2:30 on that Saturday afternoon. Entries will be accepted until 2 o'clock on the day of match. Dogs with over three championship points will not be eligible.

NOW COMES MORRIS & ESSEX, the most colorful dog show in the world. M&E is to dogs what the Derby is to horses. Eyes from everywhere are trained on the big outdoor counterpart of Westminster, which will be held Saturday, May 27, on the polo grounds of the M. Hartley Dodge estate at Madison, N. J. This department's eyes are focused that way, too. We know how green the grass will be, we can visualize the banners rippling over great dogs at a great show. Secretly, we are even beginning to savor the savory luncheon provided by Mrs. Dodge (with the assistance of Longchamps) for judges, dog writers and sech. And with about 30 judging rings going at one clip, we'll be doing a "Middleground" in order to tell you who did what, when and why.

Cats, Tide For Crown In Playoff

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With the final divisional standings in the Southeastern Conference baseball race completed, Kentucky is the statistical favorite over Alabama in their play-off series.

Kentucky cinched a play-off berth last week by sweeping two games with Tennessee and ends the regular season with only two losses and a whooping .867 average for all games.

Alabama finished with an all-game average of .640 after winning the Western Division title by splitting a two-game series with Mississippi State last week.

The play-offs start Tuesday in Tuscaloosa. After the first two contests, Alabama and Kentucky travel to Lexington to complete the three-out-of-five-game play-off series.

The only major change in the standings last week was furnished by Auburn. The Plainsmen jumped from last to third place in the Eastern Division by sweeping four straight games from Vanderbilt.

Comparative Records Favor SC Over SEC

By BERT PRATHER

The second annual Inter-Conference Track and Field Meet scheduled for Grant Field Saturday night, points to a victory for the Southern Conference on the basis of times made Saturday in the Southern Meet at Chapel Hill, N. C., and the Southeastern at Brimingham.

Southern Conference thinly-clads, running on a fast track, turned in better winning performances in eight of the fifteen events, thanks to the brilliant performance of cocky Bill Albans, of University of North Carolina, who won the high and low hurdles and broad jump.

But this does not tell the complete story. At least four of the SEC winners who did not measure up to the Southern standard due to a slow track, figure to win in the big Atlanta jamboree.

Take Whitey Overton's two-mile of 9:51.4. This is 20 seconds slower than North Carolina's Sam MaGill's time Saturday, but Overton soundly thrashed Magill in the Inter-Conference last year and should do it again.

Then there is the shotput. Paul O'Leary, of Duke, tossed the iron ball 50 feet 5 inches. This, however, is not expected to be good enough to down Alabama's talented Carl Shield, who was able to do no better than 49 feet 6¾ at Birmingham. He's a consistent 51-footer. Paul Bienz yet.

There also is little to choose between Bill Geary, of Tulane, and Halsted Holden, of North Carolina, in the 880 despite the fact that Holden was three-tenth of a second faster Saturday. Neither does it seem likely that Chambers, of N. C. State, holds an edge over such quartermilers as Bill Covington, of LSU, and Stowers, of Georgia Tech.

Most fans who attend the meet will naturally be pulling for the home conference, but Georgians wouldn't shed any tears if South Carolina's Sophomore flash, Tommy Woodlee shows to advantage in the 100 and 220. Tommy, you see, hails from Chickamauga and was a whiz in Georgia high school cinder circles while competing for Gordon Lee. Woodlee won both sprints at Chapel Hill, the 100 in :9.9 and the 220 in :21.6. He is undefeated in his specialties this year, but he hasn't tangled with Mr.

Pitchers Steal Spotlight In Amateur Leagues

Tally, Speir and Fowler Fling One-Hitters in Superb Showings

Hoover Tally, Tell southpaw, continued his sensational pitching with a one-hit, 2-1, triumph over Riverdale in a Southern Amateur League game yesterday afternoon.

This marked the second week in a row in which Tally has limited the opposition to a single safety. Constitution fell victim of his expert elbowing last week.

Two other hurlers matched Tally's performance yesterday as pitchers stole the show from the swatsmiths.

Buck Speir, who tosses for Fairview in the Eastern League, stopped Lakewood Seniors, 10-0. Only safety off his delivery was an eighth inning single by Barnes, Lakewood first sacker. Buck whiffed an even 20 batters.

The other masterpiece was credited to Harold Fowler, who paced his Atlanta Outlaws to a 6-0 victory over North East Sluggers in a Peach League game. In addition to holding the opposition to a lone bingle, Harold struck out 15 to run his total to 105 for six games.

College Park's Warren Shaw, 17-year-old right-hander, had a nohitter through seven innings against Constitution, but was touched for a single by Atha in the eighth and a double by Shipp in the ninth. His two-hitter enabled College Park to rack up an easy 21-1 win.

Pete Slaton, of Clifton Springs, was another chunker who had the batters eating out of his hand. He doled out only two hits in turning back Powder Springs, 3-0, in a Chattanooga League scrap.

Tommy Tillman, of Immaculate Conception of the County League, and Bolton's Calhoun McDougald, also sparkled on the mound with three and four-hit performances, respectively, against Gaylord and Mayson Post 216.

Snead Wins 2d Straight Western Open

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — Sam Snead won the $15,000 Western Open Golf championship for the second straight year yesterday, shooting a last-round 73 for a 72-hole total of 282.

Snead barely squeezed by two last-round threats, Dutch Harrison and Jim Ferrier, who finished one stroke back at 283.

Victory for Snead was worth $2,600.

Snead got off to a shaky start today, but rallied on the last nine holes to pull through. He had started the round with a comfortable three-stroke lead over Harrison and four over Ferrier.

Harrison and Ferrier finished ahead of the Snead threesome. As Snead went into the fourteenth hole, matters were all even and prospects were good for a tie and three-way playoff tomorrow.

But Snead birdied the fourteenth hole and got his par all the way in.

Par for the Brentwood course is 35-36—71. Snead had a 38-35—73 to go with previous rounds of 69-71-69.

The Next Ten Years Are Critical Ones

All years are crucial in that they come and go, leaving the record of failure and accomplishment. But that the next ten years are acutely crucial in the economic and political life of the nation is obvious to all.

Those years have been searchingly examined insofar as experts in the field of economics can apply their yardsticks. One of the five top economists in America, or in the world, for that matter, is Sumner H. Slichter, head of the Department of Economics at Harvard. Looking at the next ten years he declares:

1. Within this time major economic adjustments will have to be made and the country must master several economic problems for which solutions cannot be much longer delayed without grave consequences.

2. Within this decade, also, important economic trends must be halted or retarded if the community is not to be confronted with formidable new problems or even to be basically transformed.

3. Finally, before the end of this period the course of the cold war will have largely determined the relations between the United States and Russia.

4. Of the major economic adjustments that must occur before the end of the decade, two stand out in importance. One is the adjustment in the prices of farm products to long run conditions of supply and demand; the other is the adjustment of our foreign trade balance to the needs of the country and the rest of the world.

It is a masterful presentation of the economic problems of the nation. Few will disagree that support levels for farm products should become operative only in time of abnormally low demand—and not at a time of surplus. Support prices now generate surpluses and paradoxically force limits on output.

The cold war has made the matter of imports and exports not merely an economic problem, but a political one of great importance. We simply cannot win the strong support of other nations if they cannot sell us their goods.

There is a growing realization in this country, which is not yet strong enough to change the mind of Congress, that we must reverse the trade balance and restore it to what is was before 1914. To do so would temporarily hurt some of our industries, but in the long run we cannot have a sound economy unless we allow it to operate in trade and put our chief emphasis on the things we do best. Many of the leading and conservative financiers have been advocating a reversal of our trade balance. One is Richard Courts, of Atlanta, whose talks on this subject to civic clubs and to groups in Washington have stirred thought and action.

Slichter says the businessmen must regain their lost influence. He suggests methods. But, most of all, he stresses the need for labor and management—and the voting public—to have a clear understanding of the problems which must be met and how much is at stake.

We agree. Ten years is a short span of time in which it must be accomplished.

Enemies Unite To Support George

Probably no two factions in Georgia politics have created more bitter enmity than that which exists between the Cracker Party and the Independents of Augusta.

Last week the two factions held a strange, but understandable get-together.

They did not, as the saying goes, bury the hatchet. They were uniting on a strictly temporary basis and for a purpose that both groups agreed was in the interest of all Georgia.

The purpose was to form a club to press for the renomination of Sen. Walter George.

Sen. George, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and one of the leaders, along with Sen. Russell, in the successful anti-FEPC fight, has been and is too busy to come to Georgia to campaign for renomination and election. He is relying on his friends. Re-Elect George clubs are springing up all over the State. The Augusta example is only one, but it is a notable one because it demonstrates the solidarity of thinking on the State's and the nation's need for the continued services of our senior Senator.

This sentiment is aptly expressed by the Augusta Chronicle in these words: ". . . Without equivocation we will say that in our opinion it would be a calamity of the worst sort if Senator George were not returned to Congress with the solid indorsement of his constituents. He is one of this country's most distinguished and most towering statesmen, and he is held in genuine respect not only in Washington but throughout the nation—by members of all political parties."

Most Georgians will agree with that. And they also will conclude that if the matter of Sen. George's renomination is of sufficient importance to bring together such bitter political enemies as the Crackers and Independents of Augusta his reelection is assured.

A Sales Tax Is in the Cards

A sales tax is in the cards for Georgia.

Gov. Talmadge's refusal to commit himself, as he did in the 1948 campaign, to a referendum before new taxes are imposed practically puts him into the sales tax category along with his chief opponent.

A sales tax is the logical way out for the State.

The Governor, for instance, has advocated increased services and elimination of certain taxes which would have the net effect of forcing the State to look for some $70,000,000 in additional revenue. A sales tax of 3 percent will not produce that much, but it will provide a great portion of it.

As we have said repeatedly, a sales tax would hardly be opposed by the majority of Georgians if it were accompanied by a revision of the present tax structure with the 150 to 200 socalled nuisance taxes eliminated.

The sales tax idea is spreading. Many States now find it the main source of revenue. The South Carolina Legislature now is considering a bill to raise a needed $30,000,000 a year with a sales tax.

The cost of Government has increased to the point where a proportionate share of that cost must be borne by all groups and all income classifications. The average Georgian pays only about $38 a year in direct taxes. The demand for greater State services has increased to the point where it no longer is possible for property owners and business firms to pay the full cost. The load must be shared by all in proportion to ability to pay. A sales tax, without exemptions, is the only fair way.

The State cannot continue to increase its services to the people without a sales tax. However politically painful that fact might be, we wish all candidates would forthrightly admit it.

THE PULSE OF THE PRESS

'Constructive Force'

(Walton Tribune)

The new format of The Atlanta Constitution is most striking and effective, and the content is interesting and informative, as always. Congratulations to the makers of this great newspaper, which has been a constructive force in the State for nearly a century.

Weekly Par Excellence

(Pelham Journal)

Leo Aikman, Editor of the Cobb County Times in Marietta, is going with The Atlanta Constitution and will make a splendid addition to the staff of editors on this great paper, but it's a shame that he must leave his post on The Times.

We would probably do as Leo is doing—go with one of the South's best dailies—but in so doing he is leaving the editorship of one of the best weeklies in the nation, and from a local news standpoint, the coverage of Cobb County, editorial policies, general make-up and appearance there isn't a publication in America that excells the newspaper he is leaving.

The Cobb County Times has done much to advance weekly journalism in Georgia through the pace-making and standards it has set and consistently maintained.

It was Otis Brumby who started it all; he conceived the idea that a weekly newspaper could become as important to its local community as the metropolitan papers are to their States and nation. He saw no reason why a weekly publication could not be as perfect from a typographical standpoint and just as interesting in its editorial and news departments as any daily publication.

Having utmost faith in his project, the Cobb County Times immediately developed into that kind of a newspaper. Now no daily—not the big State papers just a few miles away can ever fill the place The Times has made.

Mr. Brumby retired a few years ago, and is now living the life of a "king" near St. Petersburg, Fla., with a yacht and a perfect knowledge of where the big fish dwell. But he's smart enough to secure good men to carry on, and Leo Aikman was one of these his eagle eye selected.

Aikman did a great job for The Times and we hate to think of his leaving—but since he's going to The Constitution, we'll forgive him.

'Already Perfect'

(Oglethorpe Echo)

The Constitution has been telling us for several days about their new paper and what improvements it would embody. It arrived this morning and we can detect no improvement, whatever. How in the world can one improve on perfection, anyway? It's kinder like trying to make a circle rounder. However much we disagree with them at times, to our way of thinking that paper has the greatest staff of editorial writers in the country.

'Well Done'

(Dawson County Advertiser)

When we came to the shop at 6:45 Monday morning and took The Atlanta Constitution from the mail box, the first thing we saw was Ralph McGill's picture, front page, and right in the upper left-hand corner. We looked again—Ralph could have died during the night, but when we saw the caption, "The Dream Grows Larger," and read his column, we found him to be very much alive.

"The very first newspaper column I ever wrote was on the front page, left-hand column," says Ralph and goes on to tell of his difficulties in acquiring an education.

"No voice of newspaper editorial freedom can be heard unless there is a strong well-balanced ledger behind it," he writes.

Suffice it to say: "Well done, thy good and faithful servant."

JACK TARVER

From the Cradle To the Laboratory

An eleven-year-old boy has been accepted as a freshman chemistry student at Western Reserve University.

What's his hurry? Can't he wait to be investigated?

The lad in question, who is building a Geiger counter in his spare time, reportedly prefers lectures on atomic energy to cowboy movies. News reports were inadequate in that they did not make clear whether the latter was with or without popcorn.

Even so, the revelation must come as a great shock to Hopalong Cassidy's publicity man. I can hear him now: "Who is this upstart Einstein . . . The Lone Ranger without his mask?"

Personally, I don't understand these kids who, instead of toy-trains and baseball, want to play with test-tubes and Bunsen burners.

Why, I mean, should he be so intent on investigating the workings of nuclear fission at an age when most kids are content to tinker with nothing more complicated than abandoned alarm clocks?

Why should he worry his head with calculus and chain reaction when most of his schoolmates are seeking only to master enough knots to get into the Boy Scouts?

Why, at eleven, should he be so concerned with the mysteries of atomic science? Most boys are older than that before they even get interested in those outlined in the corset section of the mail order catalog.

I knew this was the scientific era, but I thought the nation's small-fry was interested only in certain specialized applications thereof, as bubble-gum and the yo-yo.

I guess I should have known, however, that higher science could contain nothing too difficult for the facile minds of today's kindergarten graduates. Look how quickly they master the intricacies of television tuning.

Even so, it disturbs me considerably to realize that we have now reached a point where eleven-year-olds comprehend the mysteries of atomic energy and nuclear fission. Somehow I prefer to think of our destiny being in the hands of bearded scientists and not of kids who aren't old enough to shave.

This younger generation may be the death of us yet . . . if the older one doesn't beat them to it.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

President Gains Confidence on Tour

WASHINGTON—President Truman has returned from his Western trip apparently more confident than ever of his hold on the people. Those who have talked with him since he arrived back at the White House report that he has not the slightest misgivings over the outcome of the coming elections, which will decide the control of the next Congress.

Mr. Truman has his own way of evaluating the crowds that turn out to greet him when he takes to the hustings. As an old campaigner with long experience on the stump, he has learned not to be misled by mere numbers. He realizes, of course, that many people will go to hear a President speak out of curiosity, if nothing else. Whatever the circumstances, it becomes an occasion when the President of the United States makes a public appearance.

Spectacle That is true not only out in the country, but in Washington, where Presidents and other high-ranking dignitaries are more commonplace. Mr. Truman cannot make an unannounced visit to his bank to transact some private business, as he has been known to do, without large crowds sensing his presence and forming on the streets outside just to get a glimpse of him departing. It is the same at all theater performances he attends. And that in Washington, which has a reputation for being the most blase city in the country.

On his recent cross-country trip, which saw him making more than 50 speeches along the route, Mr. Truman found a generous outpouring of people everywhere. The crowds that turned out to hear him were greater, if anything, than those he commanded on his famous whistle stop campaign in 1948, when he upset the predictions of all the experts by winning re-election.

But the President places more stock in enthusiasm than he does on numbers, and he has his own way of measuring enthusiasm. It is best illustrated in a story he told after the last election. Someone asked him how he had been able to maintain such a supreme air of confidence in his election when all of the experts, including many of the top leaders in his party, had abandoned hope of his winning. "I could read it in the faces of the thousands of people who came to hear me speak," Mr. Truman replied.

He went on to say that any seasoned campaigner could learn from the expressions on the faces of the people making up his audiences whether or not they were for him. Psychologists will agree that there is real substance in what the President says. He must be a keen student of psychology to have made the correct observation he did in 1948.

Same Signs At any rate, Mr. Truman is reported to have seen the same signs in the uplifted faces that greeted him at every stop on the recent Western trip. He returned confident enough that his party will emerge from the November elections still in control of Congress. He sees nothing on the horizon as of today that threatens to change the situation.

November is still some months away, however, and the President intends to take no chances on issues arising which might throw the outcome in doubt. He plans to make other excursions into the country before the campaign is too far advanced, taking his program and his policies direct to the people.

As the President views the situation after an opportunity to go out and mingle with the people again, the only question remaining to be decided by the November elections is the size of the Democratic majority in Congress. That, in a nutshell, is the reaction he brought back to his party workers in Washington.

Unadilla Problem

Editor Constitution: Will you please give me permission in your letter column to make several corrections in the article which appeared in your May 9 issue concerning the unfortunate episode here in Unadilla last Friday evening at the Junior-Senior banquet?

The article stated that the Baptist and Methodist Ministers were present. That is not true. Neither of us knew anything of it until the next morning.

Also the article gave the impression that the law officers absolutely acquiesced in what happened and that no arrests were made. The truth is that four men were arrested and brought into police court Monday morning and fined $49.50 each—the full penalty for disturbing the peace.

Suffice it to say that it was publicized all out of proportion to its importance. The news report was both exaggerated and inaccurate. The culprits were properly dealt with.

May I add that such occurrences as took place here in Unadilla last Friday evening are generally the result of the free flow of alcoholic beverages, and judging from the lurid liquor advertisements appearing in most daily papers, it would seem that the press makes its full contribution to such conditions.

LOUIE F. SMITH,
Pastor, Unadilla Baptist Church.

(Editor's note: We regret our correspondent erred in reporting the ministers were present, but we wish they had been at the high school banquet. Their presence obviously was needed. At the time the policeman said he wasn't talking. That's all the story said about him. Apparently the four were arrested later. We must disagree, however, that in Unadilla, where a cross was burned in front of a merchant's home who had been a resident there for 20 years, and where an Easter service had been prevented by fear, news of violence against the high school boys and girls was not worth a full story. We don't think it was exaggerated. As to liquor, Unadilla is dry and where prohibition is, of course, there is no liquor sold or drunk. We respectfully submit it is toleration of the Klan mentality and influence in Unadilla which lies at the root of the trouble.)

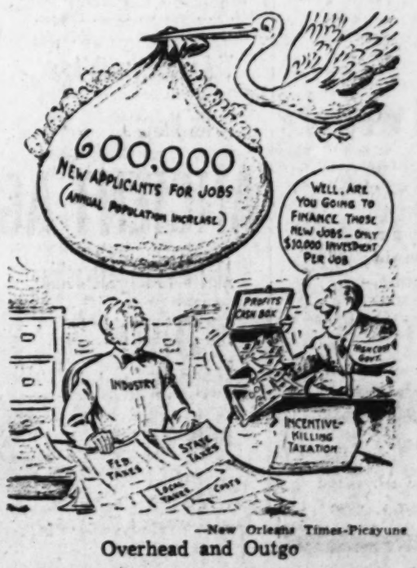

'Living Room Stuff'

Editor Constitution: I write to challenge J. H. Bowen's reasoning in his letter to the Pulse of the Public. Being an untraveled Georgian, I know nothing of the wild life of the Great Smoky Mountains. I agree that I have never seen a "black bird get into a red bird's nest," but I ask him to consider other types of "God's creatures." Yesterday, I saw a group of dogs playing joyfully on a neighbor's lawn. What color were they? No need to answer, it was such a mixture. Another neighbor has a yard full of various colors of chickens—and don't leave out the kittens. What color were the horses in the Derby—all white, all brown or all black?

I have worked peacefully, side by side, and on equal basis with members of the other race for years, and never have seen the inside of one of their "living rooms," neither have I invited one of them into mine, and don't intend to, but if one of them came to my door to ask a favor or render a service, I'd ask him in.

The Negro needs and deserves better educational and job opportunities—better services for the same money spent, etc. Those are the main issues. Let's stop crowing about this "living room" stuff and be more logical and honest in our thinking.

Controversy Over Graham

Editor Constitution: Highly interesting to a native North Carolinian was the May 18 column of Thomas L. Stokes, doing nip-ups for Frank Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina, now making his first bid for election to the U. S. Senate, a place he holds by appointment from the Governor.

There are two schools of thought in North Carolina regarding Senator Graham: That by appointment to the U. S. Senate he would be less dangerous than as president of the University, where his leftist influence over the student body was pronounced; the other is that men of his caliber are solely needed in Washington.

Senator Graham may have the complete indorsement of the people of his State, noted as Mr. Stokes says, "for fairness and sturdiness." Somewhat significant is the fact that Mrs. Charles Tillett, Jr., relinquished a coveted place on the national Democratic committee to campaign for Graham. This is a barometer of formidable opposition. The political tides in North Carolina may determine the shape of things to come. The primary of May 27 will be interesting to watch.

Editor Constitution: Please figure a little arithmetic. Thompson had 300 people at Collins, population 712. Thompson had 1,500 people at Cleveland, population 1,555. He had 1,100 at Blairsville, population 358. Herman had 7,000, most of them State employees and machinery dealers, at Albany, population 30,000.

It looks like Thompson.

A Big Help

Editor Constitution: The 1950 Easter Seal Campaign ended Easter Sunday, and although returns are still far from complete, we believe that the Crippled Children League of Georgia because of the financial support realized, will be able to continue—and possibly expand—the services we maintain for handicapped children.

We feel that great measure of credit for the success of the Easter Seal Campaign is owing to the valuable publicity given by you.

Chickens, Too

Editor Constitution: I have read several letters in your paper lately from people who say that birds don't mix. I wonder if they have ever raised chickens.

A white rooster (White Rock, for instance) will mix with every hen on the yard, if you don't keep him shut up. It won't matter to him whether the hens are Buff Orpington, Black Minorcas, Rhode Island Red or White Leghorn.

And sometimes his biddies by these different hens are bigger and better than he is. I have raised chickens. I know.

Atlanta. H. VAN BUREN.

JOHN MARVIN RAST

Whence comes peace? We idly suppose that it will come suddenly some day when the United Nations or some delegated body of men and women agree upon a policy in which they can fully confide.

Over against such hope stands Gen. Eisenhower's recent pronouncement: "Peace is more the product of our day to day living than of a spectacular program, intermittently executed."

Whatever, then, is formulated for pacific solution of problems of State must be the upsurge of patient good will practiced in home and community.

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me." (Luke 9:23.)

Grant, Lord God, that we may set forward righteousness and brotherly accord in our attitudes and acts. Keep us mindful that it is not by might nor by power but by our manifestations of thy spirit that thy kingdom comes.

American System Still Works

WASHINGTON—It is a good time now, just as we are warming up for our biennial congressional elections, when there will be the usual amount of screaming and shrieking, exaggeration and false issues, to take stock of our situation and see just how well our system of compromise and checks-and-balances serves us despite the partisan cries that one of the other party has wrecked, or will wreck, the nation. We have made progress and most of us are satisfied with it, and both parties have contributed and so have groups with diverse views who have clashed publicly like spitting cats on the back fence at night.

A text is offered just now in the bill to expand our Social Security System completed this week by the Senate Finance Committee. It varies in some respects from that recently passed by the House, among other ways, adding 10,000,000 persons to the system as compared with 11,000,000 in the House bill.

But it is certain to be passed by the Senate this session and will get support in both parties, as did the House measure, and the differences will be compromised, and President Truman will sign it into law.

We are adopting no new principle. This law merely expands the original Social Security Act approved 15 years ago, in 1935, as a "Roosevelt New Deal Reform," and with considerable bitter resistance at that time. There is virtually no resistance now. Since then we have come generally to recognize that protection of our people in times of unemployment and in their old-age is an obligation of our mechanized and complex society. Indeed, enlightened businesses have instituted pension systems of their own in case after case since—and some even before the Federal law.

As a matter of fact, business generally this time was for extension of the Federal system in order to relieve pressure from labor unions for private systems. Many strikes have resulted from this search of workers for security through their unions.

From this, let us go to other "Fair Deal" reforms, really only extension of "New Deal" reforms or application of "New Deal" ideas, about which there is hue and cry without any attempt at analysis. Despite all the noise, there are only three others which Congress has approved during the five years of the Truman administration, and only after long consideration and compromise.

They are the so-called Full Employment Act of 1946 which set up a council of economic advisers for the President to watch and report on the economic health of the nation; the long-range housing bill with its provision for slum clearance and public housing, a principle approved already by Congress in the 1937 housing act, and an increase of the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour under the wages and hours act passed by Congress in 1938 and in effect since that time.

That's the story—not an alarming one. It represents nothing revolutionary, but slow change which has served our economy and our people well. It would be hard to find many businessmen or Republicans, even the most hard-shelled of either, who would want to repeal them.

Sen. Robert A. Taft voted for all these, in fact personally sponsored the housing bill. Yet, in a political speech, he cries out that President Truman is ruining the country, thus giving a cue that will be followed by many others, as throughout our history in political campaigns. There are, of course, other things proposed about which they are complaining, things that haven't happened. They are the subject of great differences of opinion, among Democrats as well as Republicans.

Such, for example, as the President's health plan and the Brannan farm plan, to mention two of the most controversial.

They are the subject of debate now and will be so during the campaign. But the thing to remember, whatever party you belong to or vote for, is that these must, in the end, go through the slowly grinding mill of Congress, with its delays and its compromises, and that both parties will be involved in this process.

It is safe to predict now that you will see them come out in some form or other, in time—not tomorrow surely, or even next month, or even next year perhaps, but eventually. For the world has moved to the point where we are going to do such things for our people.

If you are against them, it is your duty to raise your voice and vote accordingly; if you are for them, you will, too, and just as loudly. That is our system. But it is a system based on patience and compromise and it is useless to lose your perspective or your sense of balance in hysteria.

A Warning About an Ill Wind

There are two young lawyers in our town who used to be practical jokers, but their sense of humor has become a little frayed with the years—and it could be because of the joke they played on a young man we shall call Isaac Jones. Isaac Jones was a brash young New Yorker who came to Georgia to sell law books in the 1930s. He was bold and cocky and the South was his oyster. The only thing he didn't like was the weather. The heat made him nervous.

"Oh, the weather's not so bad," our lawyer friends assured him. "Between tornadoes, that is."

"Tornadoes?" yelped Isaac Jones. "Do you have tornadoes here?"

"Oh, sure," the lawyers said soothingly. "But not more than three or four times a year. You just have to be prepared, that's all. Everywhere you go in Georgia you'll see people have tornado shelters built underground. Just a precaution, you know."

Isaac left and the Atlanta boys chortled happily at the way his cockiness had given way to nervousness. Calling sweet potato banks on Georgia farms tornado shelters was the final artistic touch, they felt.

They didn't even feel very sheepish the next day when Isaac returned and told them he had converted all of his assets into cash and bought up all the tornado insurance he could get. It served a gullible Yankee right, they felt.

They were, however, unprepared for Isaac's attitude when he came into their office three weeks later. The cockiness was gone, there were tears in his eyes and he pumped their hands in great gratitude.

"Boys, I can't thank you enough," he said. "Without your warning I would have lost everything I possessed. I was in Albany last night..."

That was the night one of the worst tornadoes the State has ever known hit South Georgia and, as Ira Butt, the Blairsville newspaper editor, later expressed it, "blowed Albany right off the map!"

Isaac Jones' car, luggage and law books, ditto.

CONSTITUTION NEWSPAPER and radio staff members refreshed themselves with birthday cake, ice cream and poetry at a gala party on the fourth floor the other afternoon—but both the hostess and the guest of honor were absent.

The party was given by Mrs. Ruth C. Malone, of 128 North Ave., N. E., in honor of a man she has admired for 20 years but never met, Ted Malone. For the last three years Mrs. Malone has sent a beautifully decked birthday cake and ice cream to the radio and news staffs on the anniversary of Ted's birth, May 18, 1908, but never attended the party herself.

Her reply to all invitations to join the festivities is sweetly stubborn: "Thank you. I'll not be able to make it. You see I do not know Ted Malone. I prefer to be the unknown but faithful listener that I was close to 20 years. I'd feel, oh, so out of place at the party."

Mrs. Malone has reared her four children on Ted Malone's poetry and organ music and her party on his birthday is a kind of thank-you for the pleasure "his beautiful friendliness" over the radio has given her through the years.

The Florida political capers are proof that coming events gather no moss. The Republicans are cheering because a Democrat beat a Democrat.

That's really scraping the bottom of the barrel. The GOP claims Smathers' win over Pepper is a rebuke to the Fair Deal. That is a neat specimen of twitchful thinking.

Anyway, Truman sent Smathers congratulations. It was easy. Just had to rub out Pepper's name.

JACK SPALDING

In Spain the South Won

MADRID—Spain's ties with the rest of Western Europe seem more traditional than actual. Once you cross the Pyrenees you leave many things behind, including, and I hope forever, the songs of Edith Piaf and the Harry Lyme theme. And you run head-one into a culture with its own distinctive music, art, architecture and social patterns. The Spaniard has a feeling for the past, a great pride in his nation's history and shows an understandable reluctance to destroy what has served him for centuries and substitute Hollywood ersatz. You see this in Madrid's flourishing theaters where the magnificent old dances and traditional costumes and music still bring down the house. And you see it very clearly in Toledo, the old capital, once Roman, then Arab, then Christian, and still a little of all three. Nothing worthy of preservation there has been destroyed, and the chains the Christian slaves wore when Ferdinand and Isabella captured the Moorish capital of Granada still hang on the outside walls of the Church of San Juan de Los Reyes.

Also in Toledo is the Alcazar, once Roman, then Arab, then a royal palace, and finally the Spanish military academy until its 72-day siege in the Civil War. The ruins of the Alcazar are preserved as a monument to the gallantry of its defenders. Today you are reverently shown the crude hospital below ground, the tombs of those who died during the siege and finally the office of the commanding general. This office is kept as it was when the fortress was relieved by the Nationalist Army. During the first days of the siege the general's son was captured by the opposition forces and a telephone call went through to the Alcazar. The son told his father that he had been instructed to say that unless the Alcazar surrendered he would be shot. The general told his son that if that was the case, to commend his soul to God and prepare to die for Spain. Of such steel and sentiment are the Spaniards compounded.

I rode the Sud-Express from Paris to Madrid, a journey of some 26 hours. The equipment is old, but the seats were built to fit the human form and not by slide rule. There is no chromium, fluorescent lighting or air conditioning, but the fine fresh air of Spring blew through the open windows night and day and if a little dust blew in with it on the electrified French side, and an occasional cinder on the coal-burning Spanish side, it was worth it.

From Paris, south, we rolled through a perfectly manicured countryside, not a leaf or blade of grass out of place, until we reached the Bordeaux area, which was South Georgia. Miles of flat sandy land grew thousands of pines, all gashed and cupped for resin. This sight was a source of much wonder and comment to my French and Spanish fellow travelers who told me this area was a sandy waste until Napoleon ordered pines grown, and that not only was it now a national asset, but there was nothing like it anywhere else in the world.

We reached Hendaye on the border about sunset where passports and baggage were checked by the French. The train then crossed to Irun and the dreaded Spanish customs. This was the great anti-climax of the whole trip. Every guide, almost every travel book remarks on the stringency of these customs and the rudeness of the officials. Every tourist in Europe knows somebody who knows somebody who was stopped here, stripped, and the lining of his clothes and luggage ripped open in search for contraband. In the light of all this high drama, I regret to report that within 10 minutes after arriving at the border, I was in a restaurant on the Spanish side, chewing tough chicken and yellow rice, my passport stamped, baggage checked, and my francs changed into pesetas. And all done with magnificent courtesy.

I decided several frontiers back anyhow that writers of travel books for the most part are fundamentally naive, incurably romantic and generally given to reporting hearsay as gospel. This journey has been without crises, sans dysentery, and lacking in thievery and sly Latin skullduggery. All this despite the fact that I'm a lazy traveler, seldom lock my door or luggage, eat what I want when I'm hungry, and drink tap water when thirsty, all contrary to the best travel advices. I've an idea that if a convention of travel writers was held in Atlanta in Midsummer, most of them would arrive in pith helmets and shorts, carrying water filters, bismuth, paregoric, and special binoculars furnished them by their publishers guaranteed to show them sharecroppers on Pace's Ferry and Fascism in the public schools.

At Irun the traveler changes trains, inasmuch as Spanish railroads are broader gauge than the French. This I understand is a relic of the old days when wars were fought entirely on the ground and logistics were completely dependent on rails and highways. Passenger equipment in Spain is antique but well preserved, and the sleeping cars are miracles of inlaid woodwork, embossed leather, embroidered velvet and clean linen. All this decor is a fine thing as it helps keep your mind off the roadbed which is of the Tallulah Falls, or Live Oak, Perry and Gulf variety.

To wake up the next morning and see the harsh central plateau of Spain is a shock after the hazy, pastel indistinction of Italy, and the prim green patterns of France. Spain is a land of primary colors, black shadows, bright light and clear, positive horizons. There is little softness in the landscape, and apparently little of the negative in the Spanish character. After the complete obsequiousness of the Italian, and the terrier-like qualities of the French, the Spaniard comes wrapped in a cloak of pride and impenetrable dignity. His bearing is austere, his manners coldly impeccable, and if he doesn't fawn over strangers, he more than makes up for it by not trying to sell you things you don't want, and by behaving in crowds like he's in a drawing room. The Spaniard obviously is an individualist with an enormous amount of self-respect and there seems to be little or no foolishness about him. And I don't believe he will take much pushing around.

There is a vigor and a verve about Spain that is totally lacking in Italy, and only occasionally apparent in France. The liveliness of Madrid makes Rome look dead and Paris somewhat senescent. The streets boil with people from nine in the morning until two or three the next morning, and the restaurants and theaters are crowded. The theaters, incidentally, put on their afternoon performances at seven, while the evening show begins at 11. Restaurants don't open for dinner until nine, and anyone who eats before 10:30 is treated as a hopeless case by the waiters. If the night life of the capital is any measure of the vigor of a people, Spain is on the threshold of a renaissance.

American tourists are still rare in Spain, which makes independent travel a little difficult, but there are tremendous compensations. As yet there are no tourist traps for your special benefit, and no quick mark-ups when you walk into a store. When you eat, or drink, or buy, you're confident you're paying the same price as the other customers. This feeling is a satisfaction denied you in Italy and France. And the Spanish waiter and shopkeeper treats you with grave dignity, and not like a child, which is among the more irritating characteristics of other Europeans who deal with tourists.

I have found being an American in Spain quite an advantage. The Spaniard is genuinely interested in you and your reactions to his country, while the Italian and French are inclined to regard you as a one-man Marshall Plan. To be an Atlantan is a double advantage. Gone With the Wind, or Lo ue El Viento Se Llevo, is much admired here. The wounds of the Spanish Civil War are quite fresh, and there seems to be a feeling that a Southerner understands these things much better than a Northerner. I have been shown towns "totally destroyed, like your Atlanta, by Spanish Yankees and the Reds."

And while this may be oversimplification, I occasionally have the feeling that in many respects the Spanish Civil War was similar to ours, but here the South won, and Jefferson Davis still is running the show.

BILLY ROSE

Pretty Is As Pretty Does

Last Summer a famous actress invited a group of friends to an elaborate dinner party at her Long Island home. With the exception of her lawyer, no one showed up, and at 10 o'clock that night she suffered a heart attack and died.

The obituary notices made no mention of the party which no one attended for the very good reason that the lawyer kept mum about it. But last night he told me the whole story and gave me permission to use it, provided I didn't identify the actress by name.

Harriet Reeves—to give her a name several syllables removed from her own—was an orphan who had come up the hard way and acquired a lot of hard ways en route, such as stealing scenes and marches on other actors, walking all over the walk-ons, and in general making life unbearable for everyone from porter to producer.

Promise Breaker Even more than her tantrums, however, the thing that embittered everyone around her was her blithe way of making promises and her blither way of breaking them. Her stock excuse was that she was forgetful, but as a columnist of the period pointed out, she never forgot to ask for an unreasonable percentage of the plays she appeared in, or to make sure that no other name was featured with hers on a marquee.

As her slights and oversights continued to pile up, people assumed they were due to deliberate meanness—and for the first few years they were. Then a curious thing happened—her forgetfulness, at first convenient, became chronic, and the actress became so much a victim of her own mental untidiness that she couldn't even remember the things she wanted to.

In her middle 50s, her heart began to do nip-ups, and under doctors' orders she retired. She had plenty of money and so life was comfortable enough, but by this time everyone in the theater hated her with a hatred which didn't even bother to be cordial and so life was lonely enough, too.

A year ago last April her birthday came and went without so much as a friendly flower or phone call, and that night, brooding about it, she had a heart attack. The physician who examined her told her bluntly that her chances of living out the year were none too good and advised her to stay in bed as much as possible.

Harriet faced up to the news like a trouper and for a couple of weeks followed the doctor's instructions, but the prospect of dying in complete isolation finally got her, and so one day she sent for her attorney.

"I want to give a big party next Saturday night," she said, "and I'd appreciate it if you'd arrange for the catering and music."

"What's the occasion?" asked the lawyer.

"Nothing in particular," said Harriet. "It gets kind of lonesome out here and I'd like to see some of my old friends."

No One Came That night the old actress wrote out invitations to dozens of theater people with whom she had worked, figuring that if she could get them all together she'd apologize for her thoughtlessness in the past and ask their forgiveness.

At 8 o'clock on Saturday when the musicians arrived, the downstairs rooms were decorated with theater posters of her past hits, and Harriet, in a sweeping black lace gown, was in the hallway with her lawyer, waiting for the first guest to arrive.

At 10 o'clock she told the servants and musicians to help themselves to the food and drinks and, assisted by the attorney, began to climb the stairs to her bedroom.

"I can hardly blame them for not coming," she said. "I used to break plenty of dates myself."

Halfway up she grabbed for the bannister, and by the time her doctor arrived she was dead.

A few days later, when her lawyer made a routine check of the papers in her desk, he came across an ironic footnote to her lifetime of forgetfulness. It was the stack of invitations to the party which Harriet had stamped and addressed—but forgotten to mail.

CHANNING COPE

Farmers Need Extended Credit

Suggestion of the day: Kudzu plants grow rapidly and will make a good start by Fall. When drought strikes there is nothing more satisfying than this miracle vine. We can't begin any earlier. Why not talk with the soil conservation man or the county agent and get started this year?

We haven't talked about credit for some time, but there isn't anything holding us back quite as firmly as the lack of money for expansion purposes on the farms of Georgia.

Here is a farmer, let us suppose, who needs $6,000 with which to put down additional land in pastures, to brace up and make livable a tenant house now useless, to do some more fencing, bring the phosphate content of his soil up to par and thereby increase production, to add ladino clover to his fescue, to add fescue to his ladino clover pastures, to add ladino to his sericea pastures, to replace the old bull with a better one, and to generally improve his farm to the place where his same routine will produce more profit.

A Problem If he borrows this $6,000 for three years at five percent interest, he is up against a problem of repaying $2,300 within 12 months, $2,185 the second year and $2,100 the third year.

But suppose he borrows this $6,000 for 30 years at five percent interest per year. His annual payments begin at $500 per year and gradually become smaller. The farmer can afford this. If he handles the loan wisely, his income will increase much more annually than the interest and amortization payments.

This sort of financing is done by all big business.

Money's Cheap These same opportunities need to be opened up to the farmer. Money is cheap at the moment (so cheap the repositories won't pay anything for its use), business is good, the farm outlook is bright, some farms need conversion to grass and some need expansion to balanced units.

When will the lending agencies offer the farmer the same treatment that other segments of business receive as a matter of course?

Memo From the Editor

Dear Constitution Reader: All of us here at The Constitution were made happy by the many congratulations which came to us on the type-face change and make-up revision which appeared here first a week ago today. There was, and this we thought most unusual—but a single criticism in the entire week's volume of mail which ran a little larger than usual. The type is beautiful and easier to read.

Use of stories supplied by the special wire from The New York Times news service, came in for many pleasing comments. This is, I think, the finest news service there is. It is not at all a selection of stories from the New York Times. It is a world-wide news service which supplies The Times with material and The Constitution, by leasing the wire and buying the service, obtains thereby all the material which The Times has at its command.

There are always persons who do worry about change, and there were one, or two on the staff who wondered if perhaps there would not be some readers—especially rural subscribers—who would not like the appearance of stories from all over the world supplied by a service bearing the name "New York." I argued that rural readers and city readers would appreciate the fact they were getting the best.

Hence, I went about the office with the very first letter from a rural postoffice on that subject. It was from Mrs. Francis L. Bailey, of Route No. 1, Alto, Georgia. She wrote, in part: "The additional news coverage provided by The New York Times news service makes the paper infinitely more interesting for those of us who do not live in Atlanta and this is particularly important in view of the present state of world affairs."

I went around cheering for Mrs. Bailey. I come from the country myself and I have always dissented from the view that people who live on farms and in small towns are not equally interested in what is going on. Too many rural parents had sons in service not to be interested in foreign and national news.

The Times service is superior. Without at all meaning to be critical of the Associated Press or United Press, it nevertheless is true they have never been able to give people the real news story. They have been factual. In politics or in handling domestic stories from the national administrations, they have never felt they could interpret without offending one side or the other, which would, of course, object to interpretation.

In reporting out of foreign countries the news agencies are fearful of being expelled from the country if they go into interpretive reporting. They believe it necessary to remain there. The net result is a great lack of any information as to what really is going on.

Rare indeed is the news agency story which explains the meaning of news, or goes behind the news to interpret it.

The New York Times service, with experienced reporters all over the world, is able to do this. The Times has an international prestige because of its accuracy and the excellence of its reporting and interpretation. That's why we are so proud to give this superior service to our readers.

Handling of The New York Times wire, which comes in over teletype machines just as the AP, UP, INS, NANA and Chicago Tribune, is, of course done by the copy desk. And a job it is.

The Atlanta Constitution is now the only newspaper in the South with six major wire services, each of which moves several hundred thousand words of copy daily.

The task of selecting and editing is a tremendous one and those who do it so capably are the unsung heroes of the newspaper business. They never get any by-lines, but without a competent copy desk, no newspaper could hold its readers.

In our case, Calvin Cox is the Telegraph Editor who reads the great mass of copy and decides which service to use on the various stories of the day. He then passes the copy to DuPont Smith, our capable slot man.

The slot man is the head of the copy desk, the great half-circle affair around which the copy readers sit. It is he who assigns the various stories to individual members of his staff for editing and heads. Each man has specialties and a flair of his own and it is up to the slot man to know the capabilities of those "on the rim." Those who make up The Constitution copy desk include: Eugene Barnes, Rufus Daniel, George Keeler, R. E. Kerby, Parker Lowell, George Tisinger, Earl Watson and Walter Wilkins.

They make a good team, as the manner in which they have handled the extra work of The Times wire will attest.

Incidentally, this is the second "Memo From the Editor." Possibly I should explain, just in case any of you missed the first one, that it will appear regularly, once or twice a week, to keep you informed of our efforts to make the new, larger, easier-to-read Constitution the South's finest newspaper.

RELIGION IN GEORGIA

'Pappy Told a Sin,' Says Logical Lynne

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

Four-year-old Lynne may turn out to be a lawyer or a theologian. She calls her grandfather "Pappy," and says "Pappy told a sin." Here's the story: At vacation Bible School she learned that telling a story is a sin.

She came to the conclusion that a story is a sin. At home her grandfather urged her to eat her spinach, so she would get fat and pretty like he is. Now "Pappy" is not fat and pretty, so Lynne concluded that "Pappy" told a sin, when he claimed to be fat and pretty. The indication is that Lynne will become a lawyer or a theologian. Anyhow, her reasoning is sound.

This reporter rises to make an earnest request of readers of this column. During his lifetime this reporter has heard thousands of sermons, and has read a truckload of books on religion. So far he has never heard a sermon where anybody was saved, sanctified and sent into service by a joke.

Do you know of any instance where a person was brought to the foot of the cross in penitence by a joke? If so, please drop me a line about it. Preaching was a serious business with St. Paul, John the Baptist, Stephen, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Moses, Nathan and a host of others. Christ said "Preach the Gospel." Paul said "Preach the word." Neither of them said anything about Joe Miller's jokebook.

Revival Season

The next four months will be a critical period in Georgia's life and history. The fact that it is a political year has nothing to do with the critical situation in Georgia. Politics will give no attention whatsoever to the moral regeneration of the citizens or the vital promotion of God's Kingdom in the citizens' hearts and daily lives.

That is left entirely with the several thousand preachers in Georgia, and the several thousand churches in small towns that will hold revivals of religion within the next four months. They are the ones that will affect the bedrock upon which Georgia stands.

Some of the works of evil will be attacked and overthrown. Many of the works of the Kingdom will be strengthened, expanded and made more efficient. Homelife in unnumbered families will be blessed. Thousands of persons will be brought closer to God. Thousands of billion-dollar boys and girls in Georgia will be converted, and make a start toward becoming giants in Georgia's life tomorrow.

The people of the churches will pray some sure-enough prayers. Some of the people will do personal work without being assigned to a committee. There will be some tears of repentance shed by persons seeking God's mercy. And there will be some shouting.

And the preachers—God bless everyone of them—have a big load to pull. Those preachers in the small towns and rural sections won't try to preach about belly-ache religion, but will proclaim the word of God with power from on high. Some of those preachers will break down and cry with the penitents. And, when the penitents find God as their forgiving Father, they will tell the world, not by signing a card or holding up their hands when nobody is looking.

St. Mark's Gospel eighth chapter, tells of Jesus visiting Bethsaida, where a blind man was brought to Him for healing. You notice what Jesus did first? He took the blind man by the hand and led him out of town. Jesus healed the blind man, and then told him to stay away from the town.

All you preachers and church people scattered all over Georgia, her me: God is my witness—I am thinking about you, and pulling for you. I cannot sing "Take Me Out to a Ball Game," but I can sing "On Christ the Solid Rock I Stand." Revelation 21:21.

Methodist Education

During the 10 years since the three major bodies of Methodists merged, 3,148,132 persons have come into the membership of profession of faith, 60 percent of whom came into the church through the Sunday schools, which now have a total enrollment of 5,862,935 persons, with adults outnumbering children among the pupils. Fewer than one percent of the 80,000 teachers for adult classes have special training for their work. During the decade more than 50,000,000 pamphlets and manuals for teacher training have been circulated.

The Methodist Board of Education, 108 members, is specializing and concentrating efforts in religious education and training. Ten years ago Methodism had 120 schools and colleges, 80 of which were accredited. The number of Methodist schools and colleges is now 122, with 101 accredited. Faculty members increased from 7,661 to 12,578, while student bodies increased from 106,642 to 218,677. Financial support given by Methodists more than tripled in the decade, as $531,204 grew to $1,764,280, and endowments grew from $162,093,582 to $238,830,526.

During the first decade of Methodist unification financial support given for schools for Negroes increased from $27,362 to $208,845, with enrollments at Negro schools going from 29,000 to 80,000. All Negro schools and colleges are now accredited, with $4,089,647 expended during the decade on construction of new buildings, and endowments increased $3,451,974.

The United Methodist Church has 10 schools of theology with 1,677 students, as of today.

A TREE GROWS IN MALAYA

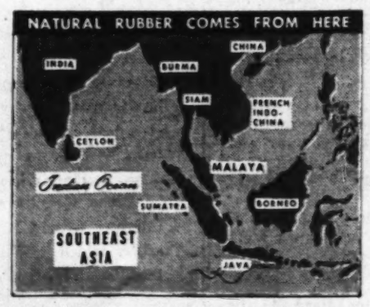

It is a rubber tree.

There was not a single one in Malaya 70 years ago.

Today there are billions of them.

They grow on over 400,000 independent one-family farms of a few acres.

Altogether, these small farms produce nearly half of all the rubber grown in Malaya. The other half comes from larger plantings, called "estates".

This rubber is sold on a free market — unsubsidized, uncontrolled and unrestricted.

Rubber is the key to the prosperity and economic stability of Southeast Asia — a stronghold of Democracy in the Far East.

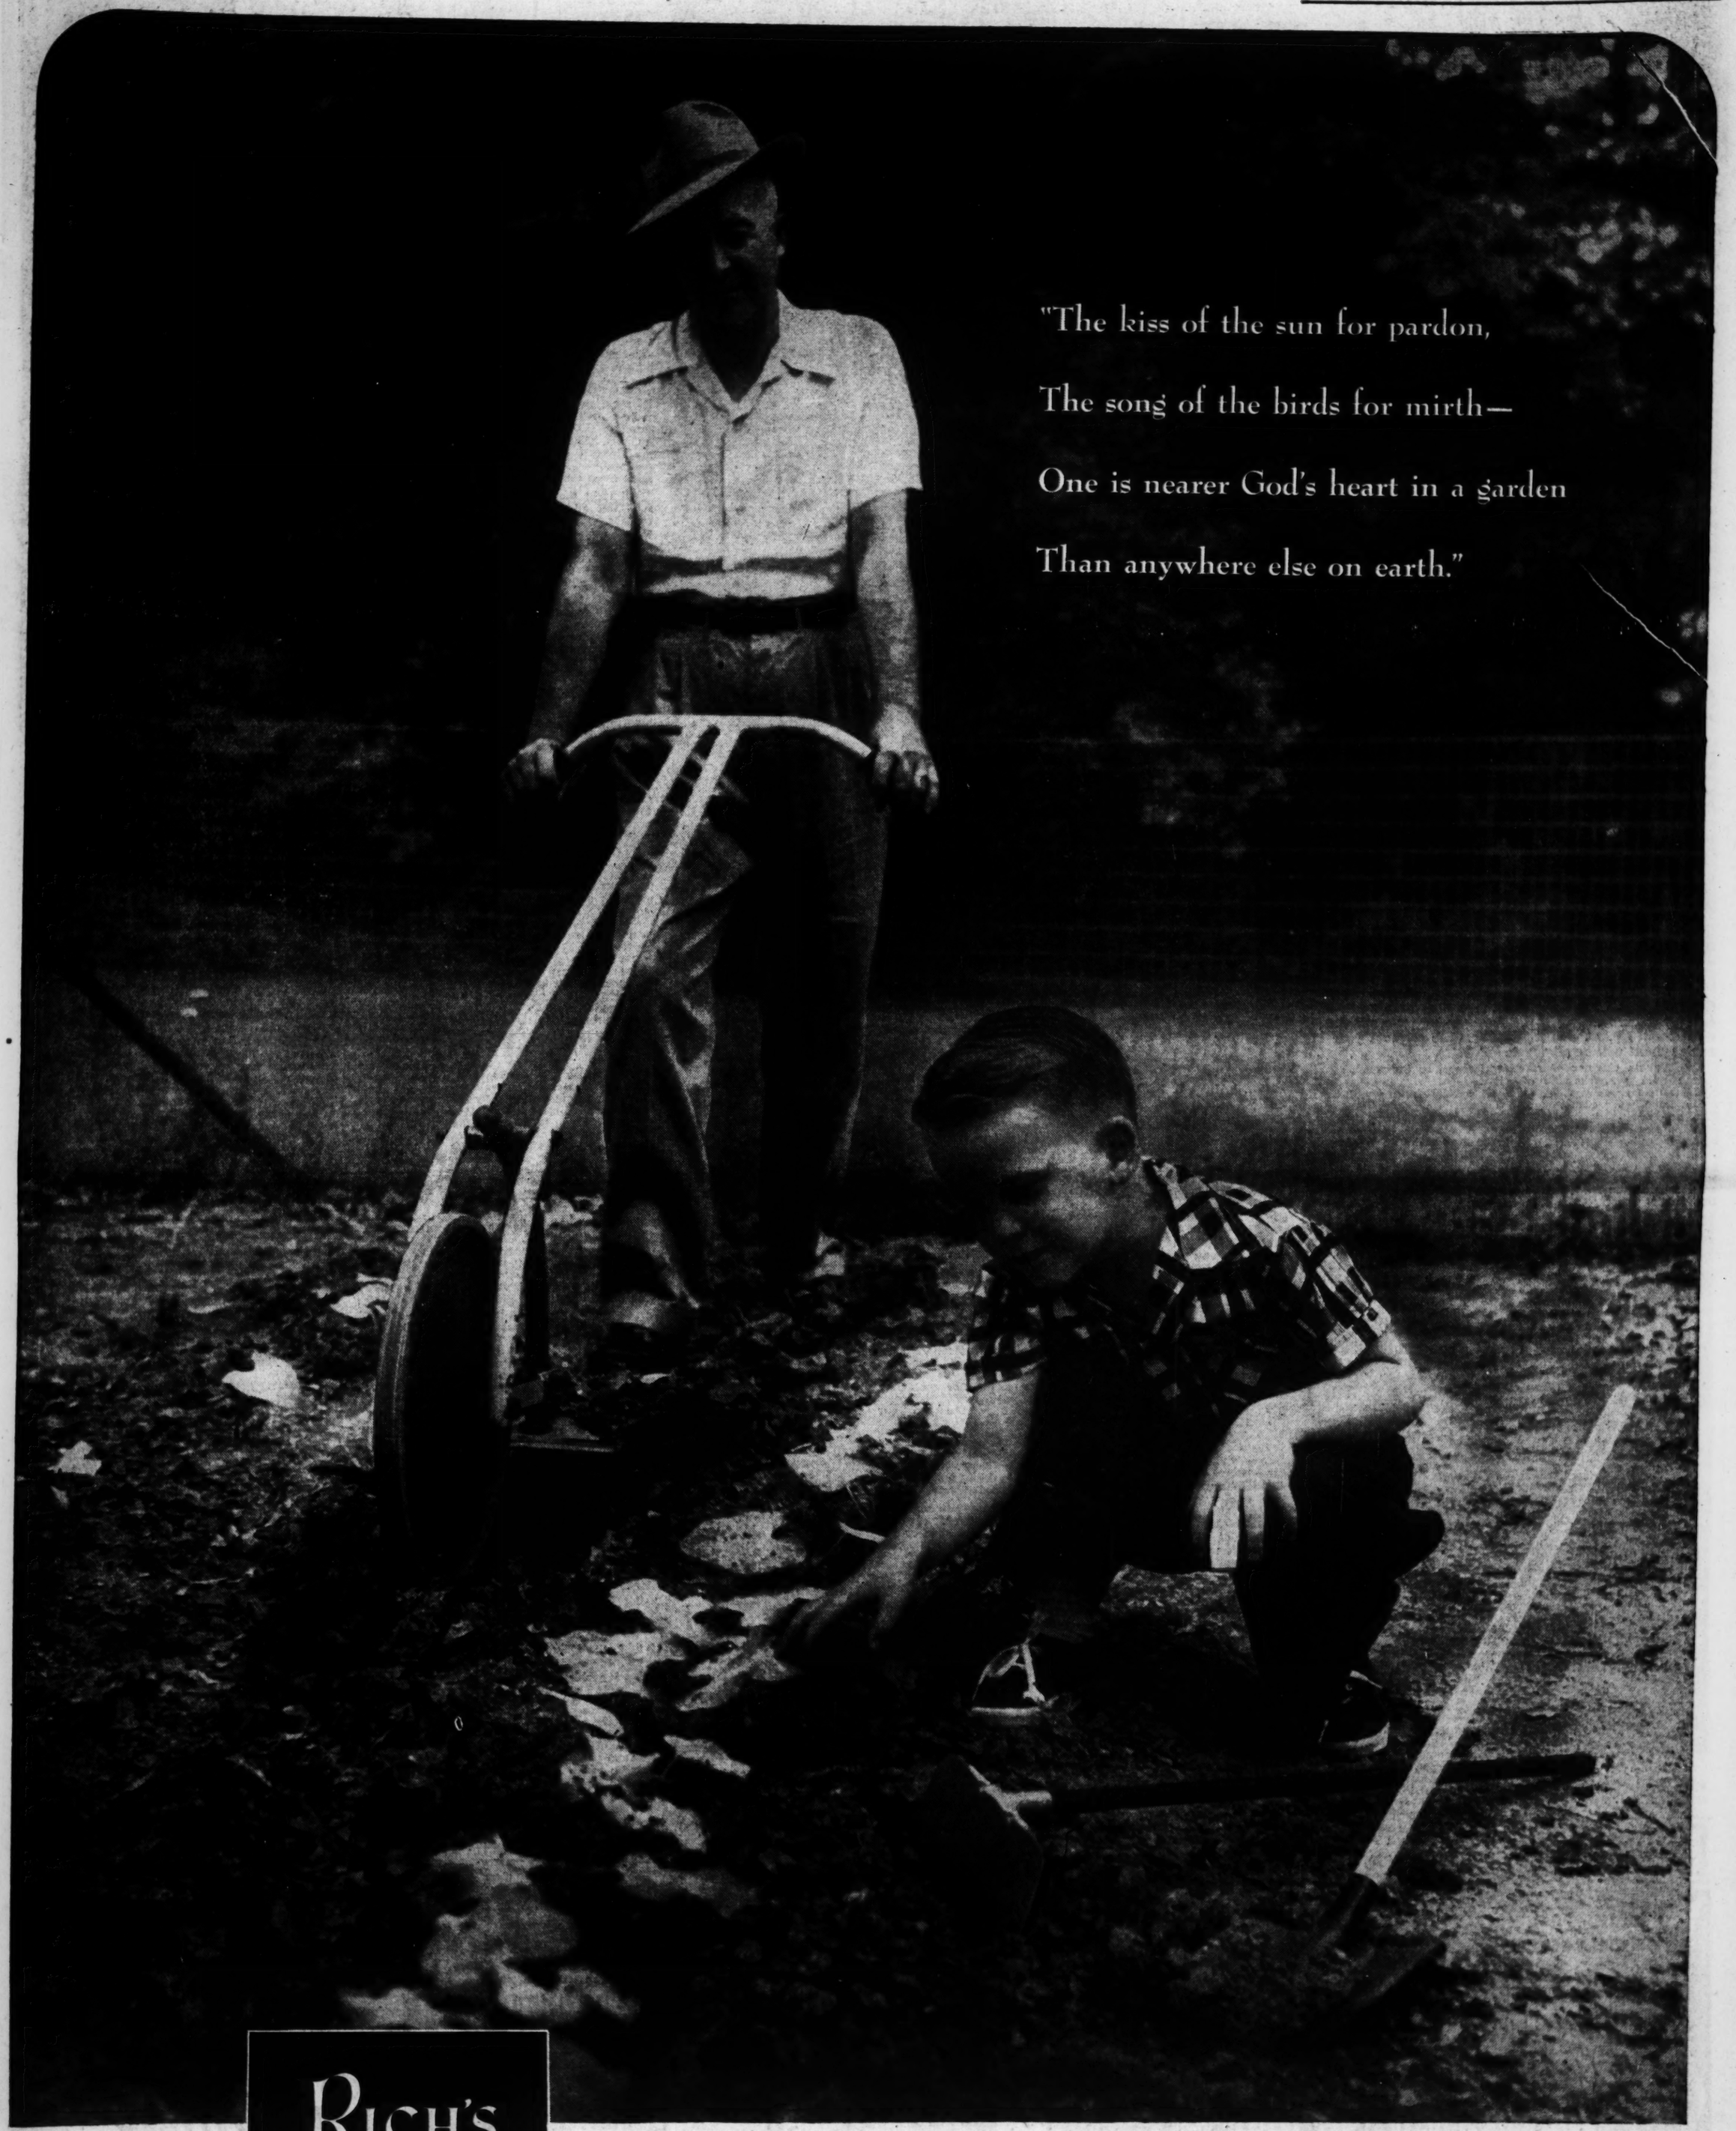

And from the milk of these rubber trees flows a way of life for the whole world — for without rubber our modern civilization could not exist — our automobiles and trucks and planes could not move.

More natural rubber means better living for all — the grower and the user — today and in years to come.

Clang, Clang, Clang Goes Her Heartthrobs

By DORIS LOCKERMAN
Constitution Associate Editor

The voice snickered as if it held in leash a wonderous, bubbling secret.

"I'm calling about the trolley strike," she announced, gleefully, "I'm in favor of it!"

I murmured that that was very interesting and started to ask her politely if she were related to one side or the other when she interrupted me.

"I'm going to be married," she caroled, "And soon! Next week! Thought you'd like to know."

I told her I would give her the society department, if she wished to make an announcement, and was about to summon the operator to transfer the call when she blurted an explanation.

"Listen," she said in some disappointment, "I told you first I am in favor of the trolley strike and then that I am going to be married. What kind of reporter are you if you can't put two and two together? What is all the stuff you keep saying about having a nose for news?

"I am going to be married because of the trolley strike, silly, and that's why I love it so. It was this way. I was standing on the corner Friday morning waiting for some kind soul to pick me up, and wondering what I'd do if some gangster came along and took me for a real ride, and there he came over the hill! He was driving a long gray car and he was alone. I smiled my best 'going my away' grin and he slowed to a stop. 'Hop in,' he said with a sensational smile. 'I'm going right to your door!'

"Well, Doris, he was the nicest man I'd ever met. We started talking about things, and before we knew it, we'd gone past my office, and were headed out toward Lakewood, still getting acquainted. I had a few minutes and before he turned around and let me out, he'd asked me for a date for lunch.

"You know me, I always take a sandwich in a bag, and frankly, it isn't too exciting to eat in the washroom, so I said 'Sure,' and at noon we went for another ride.

"I found out all about him. He's got a degree in engineering, but he doesn't practice it. He's a salesman. And sister, is he a salesman! By night he had asked me to become his lawful wedded wife!

"Oh yes, I forgot to tell you. We never went back to work after lunch. The boss thought I'd left early because I had a ride home, and he'll never know the difference until it's too late.

"It's going to be too late, in about a week. We're going to South America. We're going to be married and hop a plane to Rio and I'm going to find out for myself if it's true what they say about that town.

"A notice for the paper?

"Of course, but not today. And when it comes it'll be just a regular, run-of-the-mine item about my mother and father announcing my marriage to the son of his mother and father and nobody will know how it really happened. Only I thought you would like to watch for it, and see what one you can spot as the happiest couple of Atlanta."

She hung up, humming.

It was the first time I had ever heard "Clang, Clang, Clang Goes the Trolley" sound anything at all like the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

Memo to Job Hunters: Watch Ps, Qs, Clothes

By MAYNITA GERRY
Constitution Fashion Editor

What's the job situation with you?

The biggest crop of high school and college graduates ever to descend on the business world at one time will be pounding the pavements in a few weeks in search of jobs.

Brains are an important qualification to take along with you. But there are other things every young job-aspirant should know to make a successful splash in business. And we know just the woman to tell you. She is Marie Brennan, director of placement and training service for the Dictaphone Corporation, of New York, who has placed over 2,500 young women in high salaried secretarial positions during the past two years.

So forget your sheepskin for a while and take notes on what she has to say.

"There are more secretarial openings available now for qualified girls than ever before," Miss Brennan explained. "But don't get the idea," she added quickly, "that these jobs are open to just anybody. Bosses today are strict about two things: They expect the girls to be well-groomed and good secretaries."

In Miss Brennan's experience, good grooming often spells the difference between an enthusiastic yes! a definite no! or a cagey, "suppose we call you later."

Here are ten points on grooming for the office that Miss Brennan promises will help any girl land her big opportunity. Could be, if she's smart and the boss is a bachelor, she'll also land him.

1. HAIR—If too curly, tame it. If too straight, put a wave in it. But by all means, keep it clean. Long, flowing hair went out with the Republicans. Blonde, brunette or red, don't combine your colors. Rainbows are beautiful, but not on your head.

2. MAKEUP—Use it by all means, but don't go overboard.

3. HATS—Wear one. Save the kerchief for skiing, and the bows for the maternity ward.

4. PERFUME—The males go for it . . . to a degree. But don't overdo. Heavy cologne or perfume will shorten any interview and/or dinner date.

5. ODORS—Speaking of odors, heed those ads that say, "even your best friend won't tell you!" The only thing your prospective boss will tell you is to leave, if you're not careful.

6. NAIL POLISH—Be well manicured. However, either wear nail polish unchipped or don't wear it at all.

7. GIRDLES — Should you wear one? If you're old enough to look for a job, the answer is "yes."

8. HEELS—High, medium or low, just be sure they are straight. Fashion magazines show low heels, but most gentlemen prefer high heels that slim the angles . . . so!

9. BLOUSES AND GLOVES—Light blouses and gloves are lovely, but only if they're fresh.

10. DRESS THE PART—Wear practical clothes. If you are decked out in a swishy cocktail dress, don't go to the office . . . go to a cocktail party.

Potatoes, Meat Make Good Pie

"Since will power is a necessary ingredient in staying with a diet, will you tell us if there are any particular foods which help stiffen the will?"

That's a good question, for it gets right to the meat of the diet. There are foods which bolster the dieter's will, and these are the foods that comprise a scientifically balanced reducing diet.

First, why do we eat? Mostly to feel satisfied and stave off hunger pangs. Of course we eat for nourishment, but that's not what we think about when we sit down to dinner. We choose foods that satisfy. So the foods with a high satiety value—that is, the foods which bring that feeling of satisfaction that prompts the diner to sit back and say, "There . . . that was a good meal"—are the ones everyone wants. And they are the same foods that bolster the will.

All right then, what gives a food this all-important stick-to-the-ribs quality? Well, the stomach is a muscular organ, and a healthy stomach likes to keep busy. The foods that call forth physiologic activity help the diner feel satisfied.

Topping the list is meat, and a meal that contains meat sticks to the ribs. Meat is a protein food. We've talked before about the importance of protein in a reducing diet to furnish the materials that replace worn-out structures, and also to stimulate the body to increased output of energy. And since protein is high in satiety value too, that is another reason modern reducing diets furnish liberal amounts of meat, fish, eggs and cheese.

Milk is also high in satiety value. Whole milk is far more satisfying than skim milk, due to its fat content. However, buttermilk is highly satisfying, which is the reason I often suggest a glass about 4 in the afternoon . . . zero hour for dieters.

Eggs come third on the list, but much of their satiety value depends on the way they are cooked. I recall hearing an argument between two women—one claimed that hard-cooked eggs were less fattening than soft-cooked or poached eggs, and the other argued that she didn't see how that could be since they all contained the same number of calories. Again the difference is the satiety factor—hard-cooked eggs linger longer and therefore have that stick-to-the-ribs quality.

And which would you think had the greater satiety value—bread or potatoes? Actually potatoes do, and meat and a potato together seem to increase the satiety value of the meat. That is one of the reasons for including a small baked potato at dinner. Of course putting a goodly amount of butter on bread makes it highly satisfying, but also high in calories.

The watery vegetables have little satiety value. However, combined with the stick-to-the-ribs foods, they help make reducing easier by acting as space fillers—besides furnishing needed nutrients.

One more tip—a hot beverage at the finish of a meal gives soothing comfort for few calories.

Send for the "Will Power Building Diet." Address request to Ida Jean Kain, care of this newspaper, and enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

MARY HAWORTH

Teen-Age Girl Defies Elderly Grandfather

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an old man practically alone in the world with the exception of an orphaned granddaughter, 16 years of age, who has been the apple of my eye, especially since the loss of my wife seven years ago.

Gwen has always had everything a child should have, and our home has been made as pleasant as possible for her and her young friends. She returned this with love and obedience that made her very dear to me, until she entered high school—since when I have become merely an unreasonable and brutal tyrant.

I require that all new male acquaintances be presented and properly introduced to me before she is allowed to go out with them. Whenever they call to take her out, I require that they come to the door and not merely honk at the curb. The curfew hour is 10:30 p. m.

HE'S CONSULTED DOCTOR, LAWYER

I forbid her to smoke or drink alcoholic liquors, and I insist that she do the homework assigned by her teacher. I have largely given in to her taste in clothes; she selects and wears what she wants and I seldom criticize her make-up. Without using any pressure I have always encouraged her to attend church and Sunday school, but she has dropped both.

I am now in feeble health and my doctor says I can't stand this situation any longer. Gwen has an uncle on the other side of the family, who is willing to take her into his family in return for the rather liberal terms I offer. They are good folks but their home is humble and conditions quite different from what Gwen has known. I could also send her to a year-round boarding school.

Gwen assures me that she will run away from either arrangement. Just where to is the question, for I have definitely arranged to close my home and live in a nursing home. My lawyer says I am under no legal obligations to the girl, and I never want to see her face again. Have you any suggestions? F. C.

DEAR F. C.: In stating your case, you say with heavy irony that you have become "merely an unreasonable and brutal tyrant" since Gwen entered high school. There is a folk saying (maybe you've heard it?) that many a truth is spoken in jest, and I think your dry quip aforementioned is a revealing slip of that order.

Being an old man practically alone in life, as you ruefully say, it would be one of the world's eighth wonders if you were a successful mother-substitute to orphaned Gwen, and were worrying along quite comfortably about the business of getting her safely through her teens.

For your encouragement and consolation, it should be remarked that even if you were a genial character, in excellent health and spirits, and cordially interested in helping Gwen grow to optimum social stature (which you're not)—even then, being a man, you are on the wrong side of the fence to do a bang-up job.

You can't help it if you're not mother-material, heaven knows. But at least you might be more humble about your natural handicaps for the responsible role that Providence has assigned you in this relationship. And you should wake up to the truth that you are a terrible martinet, whose customary requirement of everyone is that they jump to please you. Even your doctor and lawyer are yes-men, it seems, to judge by their backstroking utterances cited here.

RUB IS AGE VERSUS YOUTH

Having revised your awareness on these points, you might then stop blaming Gwen for reacting unfavorably to your latter-day bumbling tyranny; and above all stop threatening to cast her off because of it—the most cruel retaliation you can muster to show "who's boss."

The rub is this: 1. You are feeling the weight of age just when Gwen is emerging from childhood (like a chick from its shell) and moving eagerly towards womanhood. Thus at a time when you are opposed to new exertions for any reason, she is at an age when her social mentors (chiefly you) should bring an open mind to all that concerns her, if said mentors are to advise and guide her constructively.

2. To evade the stress of trying to maintain a living, growing relationship with Gwen, you hand down a decalogue of "Do's" and "Don'ts" supposed to take care of your protective obligations to her—a gesture that tends to treat her as a dummy. And to the extent that she has life in her—undamaged health of mind and body—she will involuntarily fight that numbling trend. My suggestion is to stop hating Gwen for growing up, a natural process that she can't prevent, and that makes her a trial at times, of course. If you can't "mother" her adequately, make other arrangements for her care; but not in the spirit of shipping a traitor off to Siberia. M. H.

Imaginative Atlanta Society -:- -:- Burlesques American Periodicals -:- -:- At Magazine Masquerade

America's magazine publishers weren't present, and it's probably just as well, for they would have probably taken a dim view of proceedings as the Standard Town and Country Club brought publications to life in Atlanta this weekend with a "Magazine Masquerade." Members of the club came dressed in costumes that represented magazines, and colorful publications were roundly outdone by imaginative club members. QUICK, for instance, the newly-popular Cowles news magazine, came idling in the modern front door as two, four then six rabbits. Flair got the burlesque treatment, as did Sport, Holiday, Life, Time and some long-forgotten numbers that kept younger couples guessing. Mr. and Mrs. Mort Nathan were judged the best magazine present with their mimic of "True Confession." The pictures, left to right, show: (1) Mrs. Jack Eisman as a Varga Girl, Jack Eisman as the Astrologer, and Mrs. Clarence Elsas, as Varga's Halloween girl. (2) Mrs. Oscar Straus pokes a gun in her husband's face as they represent "Western." (3) Dr. Marvin Goldstein gets help from an authentic rubber mask as he plays the role of "Esquire" and Mrs. Frank Ferst plays "Time." (4) Mrs. Louis Regenstein, Jr., came as the "Daily Worker," and Clarence Elsas dressed comfortably as "Woman's Home Companion." (5) Mr. and Mrs. Louis Long held the theme of the exclusive club which sponsored the unique ball by representing "Town and County." The unique presentation was held Saturday night at the new clubhouse.

Rural Home Living New College Course Wrinkle

By AGNES REASOR OLMSTEAD
Constitution Home Economics Editor

MILLEDGEVILLE—Reminiscent of World War I was a song, "How You Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm After They've Seen Paree." It's still a problem to keep "'em on the farm"—that is, everywhere except at Georgia State College for Women.

Here in Milledgeville, the girls fight to live on "the farm"—in a beautiful, yet practical farm house, which is one of the Home Management houses girls in the School of Home Economics work and live in for one quarter.

There's a unique education story about this house for there are only two others like it in the United States.

Faculty folks at GSCW knew many of their graduates would go out to teach students from rural Georgia. They knew too that if the girls could actually live in a real farm house with garden, chickens, cow, cat and other "problems" it would be the best possible background for teaching or even for their own way of living.

TYPICAL HOUSE

This is the first quarter the house has been used. It is almost an entire project done by home economics students as part of their many courses. The house class planned the 8-room, 3-bath 2-porch house as an example of a $12,000 to $15,000 home many Georgians can have. Everyone contributed old furnishings and the students started to work painting, refinishing, slip covering and remaking everything to fit into their planned color scheme. The day I was there they had the ends of some metal twin beds to cut off and repaint, some lamp shades to make, one chair still to slip cover, and other problems just as you and I.

Lest you think the house is too perfect, I hasten to add the girls are saving from their grocery money to buy a wood stove for the kitchen this Winter. They have to have it for it's the only way to heat the kitchen!

This rural home is most attractive because good basic simple art principles have been followed. Colors are warm and friendly, furniture is livable and comfortable, and conveniences are those most families can plan for.

TUDENTS DO ALL WORK

The home ec students do all the work — clean, cook, sew, plant shrubs, wash, iron. Come Fall and the girls who will be living in this practice house then will have to plant garden and take on "outdoor jobs." All this is in addition to going to regular classes every day.

The six girls in the house rotate duties of manager, cook, assistant cook, housekeeper and hostess for experience. Lois Roberson from Ochlochnee, Ga., said, "I love living here and have learned a great deal. All I have to do now is figure out how to do all the work without four maids." (A problem every homemaker faces!)

BUDGET A MUST

Young men and fathers please note, these girls are learning to live on a budget and it's not just a play one. Every cent must be accounted for with records and receipts in the ledger book. Their working capital is State funds and therefore must be audited!

The girls allow 75 cents per day for food. Here is a typical day's menu:

Breakfast—Fruit, bacon and eggs, toast, jelly, coffee.
Lunch—Cheese croquettes, cole slaw, toasted rolls, ice cream fruit sundae, iced tea.
Dinner—Flank steak, creamed potatoes, green bean salad, hot biscuits, milk or iced tea.

"We surely like our own cooking and even gain weight," said Jane McGee, of Roberta, Ga., another "rural resident." Jane went on to say the menus had to be nutritionally balanced, so to keep within the budget they have dessert and meat just once a day.

"Don't think our budget does not permit entertaining because it does," said Virginia Hulsey, from Buford, Ga. "We have some sort of party every week. Last week we had a barbecue for our dates before the dance."

URBAN HOUSE PRACTICE HOUSE TOO

While this farm home is new at GSCW, Dr. Katharine Holtzclaw, Chairman of the Home Economics Department, glowed with pride over the other practice house—a luxurious brick Southern home where another group of home economics seniors live.

The routine of work is about the same here and the girls are very proud of this fine home. I'm much indebted to these girls and their advisor, Miss Ruth Maynard, for the excellent breakfast they prepared for me before my trip back to Atlanta. They must have known red raspberry preserves on hot toast are favorite foods with me.

Creamed dried beef with tomato slices sauteed lightly makes a delicious Sunday night supper dish served over hot cooked rice or noodles.

Real Love Wonderful

But Don't Fall In Love With Love

By SHEILA JOHN DALY

They say that falling in love is wonderful, and so you think you'll take a fling at the great national pastime. But before you get stars and a predatory gleam in your eye, better make sure that you are not just falling in love with love. It can happen. Maybe you have been seeing too many of those and-they-lived-happily-ever-after movies, or perhaps it's just that all the other girls are neatly paired off with fellow friends, but before you know it the mood is on you—and you have latched on to the first unsuspecting male to cross your path.

You like the idea of having some one to buy your sundaes, carry your photo in his wallet, and hold your hand. It's pleasant to know that there'll be a male voice on the other end of the phone at least once a night, that you always will have some one to walk you home from Hi-Y meeting and that, come prom time, you don't have to worry about a bid. And this is all very fine; it's a reassuring feeling to know that a boy cares about you more than somewhat, and that you are following the date pattern established by the rest of the crowd.

Just make sure, for your sake and that of your current beau boy, that you are not fooling yourself; be certain that you really like him and not just the idea of having some one to call your own. It's easy to fall into the habit of pretending that the romance is for real, when you're just biding your time till some one more exciting comes along. It's not fair to the fellow who probably is sincere in his affection—he'd be the most surprised character in the world to discover you're just carrying a torch to light the way to a new date mate. But more important, it's not fair to yourself. You can get so used to the idea that you're in love, just because the moonlight's right and the mood is on you, that you won't even recognize the real romance when it comes along.

High school is the time for looking around, dating a lot, and trying to decide what kind of fellow you want on a lifetime basis. There'll be romances, many of them, between your freshman and senior years, but most of them will be the here-today-and-who-tomorrow kind. So take it easy; it's fun to fall in love, but careful you don't push yourself!

MRS. NELSON NEWMAN

Bride Given In Marriage ByGrandfather

Given in marriage by her grandfather, James F. McArthur, Miss Martha Lewise McArthur became the bride of Edward Nelson Newman at a recent ceremony solemnized at Glenn Memorial Chapel, with the Rev. L. H. Miller officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Lewis McArthur, of Decatur. She wore the wedding gown of her sister, Mrs. Edward M. Womack, who served as her only attendant. The gown featured a yoke of mousseline de soie outlined in seed pearls. Her illusion veil was caught to a coronet of orange blossoms which was first worn by Mrs. William R. Magee, of Decatur. She carried a Bible, caught with a spray of orchids and showered with orange blossoms.

James Roy Carey was best man, and the ushers included Winston W. Gross and Thomas Wade Allen.

After the ceremony, the bride's mother entertained at a reception at her home in Decatur. Miss Dorothy Herring kept the bride's book.

Mr. Newman and his bride left for a honeymoon in New Orleans. They will reside in Decatur.

FAMILY AFFAIRS

It's Not Naughtiness When Child Runs

By GLADYS BEVANS

Our Scottie had a favorite toy. It was (to us) a rather dirty, very-much-chewed rubber thing in the shape of a rodent. But to our pooch, who once caught a real rat, heard it squeak and gave it a swift clever shake that broke its back—this rubber toy was marvelous, especially when it squeaked as he bit it.

What he adores is for you to throw it for him. Then he dashes after it, catches it, brings it almost within your reach—growls menacingly, and retreats, holding it just beyond your hand. You follow with a great fuss, and he gargles his bark with apparent fierceness, but really with delight! He uses a sort of teasing play, which creates just the sort of fun and excitement that give interest to "a dog's life."

"My little John is getting to be so disobedient," writes his serious young mother. "I tell him to do something, and he laughs and runs away. Sometimes I tell him not to do a thing, and he will look at me out of the corner of his eye and do the very thing I've told him not." This might be a composite letter — I get so many of them.

What many mothers don't realize is that as their babies are no longer babies and rooted in one place, but get so they can walk and talk and run, they become increasingly personalities.

The small curly-head who laughs and runs away—the little cherub who cocks an eye at you and does just what you've told her not to—is just playing with you; not being naughty. You're such a practical, busy grownup person that, if you yourself "play" at all, you probably leave it until the end of your day. But small sons and daughters don't wait — they take this fun where they find it. If you don't provide it, they'll create some themselves. Often it looks like naughtiness.

STORK SET

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Kiser, Jr., of College Park, announce the birth of a son, Stephen Marshall, April 27, at Crawford Long Hospital. Mrs. Kiser is the former Miss Ernestine Petty, of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Truett Brooksher announce the birth of a son, John Truett, on May 14, at Crawford Long Hospital. Mrs. Brooksher is the former Miss Polly Harper, of Tignall.

MRS. EUGENE BOWERS

Mrs. Bowers, newly elected sponsor for the Sigma Nu fraternity at Georgia Tech, was honored recently at the annual White Rose Formal, held in the Dinkler Room of the Hotel Ansley. The dance was followed by a breakfast at the chapter house. Mrs. Bowers is the wife of former Comdr. Eugene Bowers.

Tayco Offers Spring-Operated Window-Type Garage Doors

Beautiful Lifetime Aluminum

By JIMMY CHAMBERS

Using heavy gauge, adequately braced, durable aluminum, which is not vulnerable to dents or distortion and will not rust, rot, warp, or sag, the L. S. Taylor Manufacturing Company makes aluminum garage doors that will last a lifetime.

L. S. Taylor, President of the Company, points out that some aluminum garage doors are susceptible to dents and distortions due to thrown rocks, baseballs, etc., but his concern manufactures a garage door with heavy gauge aluminum that will withstand these accidental indentations.

The doors are equipped with ball-bearing, rubber-tired rollers to assure smooth, quiet operation.

Its perfect spring balance assures feather-touch operation, which is permanent througout the lifetime of the garage.

They are locally manufactured to standard sizes for immediate service or they can be made to fit the customer's garage door opening within a few days. They are furnished with or without windows and can be left in a natural finish or painted any color desired to harmonize with your color scheme.

Tayco doors are sold on an installed basis and guaranteed, or they can be delivered with complete installation instructions for the contractor or home owner to make his own installation.

The 1950 doors are equipped with Yale locks, which can be unlocked from either the inside or outstide. The lock is a snap action type, which automatically locks when the door is closed.

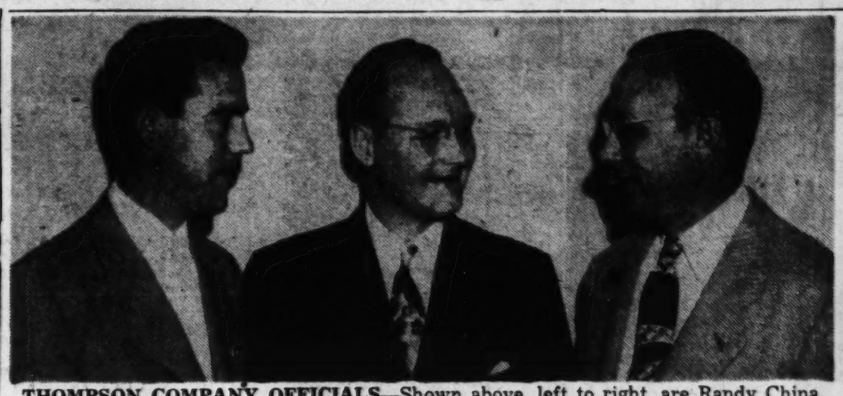

They are completely weathertight, this feature being achieved without using rubber weatherseals which deteriorate and need replacing.

They have a very low first cost and require no service, which makes it suitable for the contractor requiring hundreds of doors or for single installation on the garages of the finest homes built.

The doors are manufactured in strips that are crimped together, therefore, in case of an accident, such as backing the car into the door, they can be quickly and inexpensively repaired.

Since the doors are manufactured locally, 851 Marietta St., N. W., it eliminates transportation costs and other handling charges, thereby providing more quality for less money.

Tommy Thompson, President of the Thompson Company in Atlanta, and distributor of General Electric gas and oil heating equipment throughout Georgia, announced today the opening of a few franchises within the State.

Dealerships are available in some counties and cities and Mr. Thompson pointed out that interested dealers should contact him immediately in Atlanta. The address is 2125 Piedmont Rd., N. E. Telephone EMerson 5617.

GE gas and oil heating units are fast becoming the most popular specifications of architects and engineers, and the usual choice of home, office and building owners. A leader before the war, GE has forged well ahead to unprecedented sales in the last several years.

"Good heating just doesn't happen," explains Mr. Thompson, "it is planned in advance by people who know heating—people who have anticipated the problems of the eventual user; no wonder the designers of modern homes and buildings — new or remodeled — and the owners sensibly consider GE heating as a major part of proper planning.

Home owners say simply, "I like GE heating because less heat goes up the chimney—and more into my home." Building inspectors point out the GE safety features and the approval of the American Gas Association and the Underwriters' Laboratories Architects say: "GE's five sizes in gas-fired furnaces make it possible to fit every client's need."

Air-conditioning engineers praise the proper circulation famous with GE. The builder's consistent remark is: "GE furnaces can be installed faster and save money on installation whether for big housing projects or single homes." And the housewife—the real critic who passes final judgment in the home—"a GE doesn't crackle, thump or hammer—it's quiet; and it fits right in with our decorating scheme. What's more—it's automatic heat, and I just dial the temperature I want—when I want it."

Gas or oil fired—which to select? That's the problem Thompson solves. Far-seeing, practical people are making arrangements now and are calling the Thompson Company to arrange for a free survey by one of their dealers. You, too, will want the benefits of the engineering, installation and service departments of the Thompson Company dealer so that your plant will be properly sized, of the proper design, and properly installed and serviced. Get the comforts and conveniences found only in GE gas and oil heating equipment; and remember, your selection of a heating unit is one of the major decisions for your home or building.

Other lines handled by the Thompson Company, wholesale distributors of heating and cooling equipment, are USAirCo gas-fired unit heaters, Holly gas, wall and floor furnaces, Lonergan oil circulators and Worthington air conditioning. If you are a dealer and are interested in handling GE heating equipment or any of the other lines distributed by the Thompson Company, contact them at R-2125 Piedmont Rd., N. E., or telephone EMerson 5617.

Maico Quiet-Ear Designed By the Hard of Hearing

No longer is there need for the hard-of-hearing to feel self-conscious and embarrassed because of their inability to hear. Nor is there any need for them to be left out of all the fun and enjoyment of life because of their loss of hearing.

In the world-famous Maico laboratories, the Maico scientists have perfected a brand-new, lightweight Maico Hearing Aid. This new addition to the already long line of popular hearing aids, is called the Quiet-Ear, and it is classified as the hearing aid designed by the hard of hearing.

Yes, it might well be said—every person using a Maico hearing aid contributed to the remarkable new developments present in Maico Quiet-Ear.

It seems to float in mid-air when you wear it. No irritation from case "friction noise." Why? Because Maico users, in letters to their laboratories and in conversations with Maico dealers, like the one located at 225 Peachtree Arcade, stressed the nuisance of this characteristic in previous type aids.

Detail after detail—audiograms, fitting records, letters of Maico users—were studied and weighed. They guided the Maico technicians in the research that made possible the unprecedented features of the Quiet-Ear.

W. H. McClain, Jr., Maico's Atlanta representative, points out that with a Maico hearing aid, you have the nearest thing to Naturalness of hearing that it is possible to obtain for the heard of hearing. He adds that in their fitting room you obtain a precision fitting, using the best testing equipment made for this particular purpose.

Also, in their present location they maintain a service department that is staffed by experts with many years experience backing them. Mr. McClain states that correct hearing aid service makes for more successful hearing.

Mr. McClain has a complete line of all the 1950 Maico models, including the Secretear and Hearrings, a picture of the latter being featured on this page.

The reliability of the instrument, the reasonableness of the cost of operations and the fact that Mr. McClain stresses hearing above everything else, has much to do with his success in the hearing-aid field.

If you are suffering from loss of hearing or you suspect that your hearing is gradually failing you, drop by Atlanta's Maico representative at 225 Peachtree Arcade and have a test made. Find out for sure, before its too late. Call AL. 1591 for an appointment or just stop by on your next visit downtown or on your lunch hour.

Clothing noises spoil your hearing?

NOT MINE! I have the NEW Maico "Quiet-Ear" hearing aid

● I once was troubled by scratchy, crackling sounds, nearly every time I moved. My old hearing aid was more of a nuisance than a help. But now it's a pleasure to hear. My new "Quiet-Ear," with its jewel-like, streamlined case, really stays quiet in my pocket. And my hearing comes through without interference.

A demonstration does not obligate, so come in, or write. Learn how you, too, can enjoy noise-free hearing . . . with the new streamlined "Quiet-Ear."

CARPETS CLEANED QUICKLY—Above shows Mrs. J. E. Lewis, of 665 Upton Road, using the new Glamorene rug cleaner. This amazing new product is being introduced in the Southeastern States by Floors, Inc., located at 840 DeKalb Ave., N. E. It is not a liquid, powder, soap or foam and there is nothing to add or mix. For full information, contact Floors, Inc., at the above address, or call CY. 6966.

Not a Liquid Or Powder; Easy to Use

Glamorene, an amazing new patented material, is being introduced in the Southeastern part of the United States by Floors, Inc., of this city. It cleans carpets and rugs absolutely dry, ready to walk on, in 15 to 30 minutes, even in wet, stormy weather.

It is not a liquid, powder, soap, foam, jelly or alkali, and there is nothing to add or mix. Cleaning with this new material is so simple, so foolproof, and so inexpensive that both home owners and industry have found that there is no excuse for ever having dirty carpets again.

Carpets which are kept clean are more attractive, last year longer and promote better health, due to the removal of germ-laden dust and filth. One rug authority, with over 30 years of experience, when shown Glamorene, stated definitely that everyone with rugs or carpets on their floors should always have this material available for use at all times. He further stated that by using Glamorene when it was needed, all carpets and rugs would be kept clean and attractive and would amaze owners by the many extra years of life.

The manufacturer of Glamorene has happily announced the outstanding news that this material has been officially approved by the American Hotel Association. The New York Research Corporation, official research laboratory for the Hotel Association, has approved Glamorene as satisfactorily meeting their specifications established for special carpet cleaning compounds. Available records indicate that this is the first time any material of this type has met their rigid specifications and has been given their subsequent approval.

Theaters, railroads, air lines, clubs, hotels, steamship lines, office buildings, churches, institutions and home owners by the thousands have found that Glamorene does a perfect cleaning job on carpets, without any of the normal hazards encountered in this type of work. Rug cleaners in many parts of the country have found it to be the most satisfactory material to use for all work in homes or other on-location cleaning.

Floors, Inc., state that users of Glamorene have found that the claims made for the material are more than true. It does not soak carpets and needs no rinsing, prevents mildew and warp-rot, and leaves the sizing of the rug intact. Glamorene frees imbedded sharp sand and grit, does not run the colors but brightens them; raises crushed and matted-down pile—fluffs it like new. The curl in twist weave rugs and carpets is not loosened as in wet cleaning. All insect and bug larvae are destroyed on contact during the cleaning operation.

Glamorene gently dissolves and absorbs soot, weather film, soil, food residue, grease and oil, which distorts color and flattens pile. If the material is used when urine contamination of pets is fresh, it acts as a buffer against dye discoloration and removes odors. In fact, Glamorene is so easy to use when things are spilled on carpets that there is no real reason why virtually every carpet should not be free of all discoloration. It can be used with any ordinary hand or long-handled, stiff-fiber scrubbing brush. A rotary-type electric floor machine may be used. The simple fact is that Glamorene does an amazing cleaning job without necessitating the use of special types of equipment.

One gallon of Glamorene will clean approximately four or five 9x12-foot rugs, depending on the condition of them, which means that it is very inexpensive to use. Floors, Inc., say that they have never handled a product with such is noninflammable and noncombustible, yet works quickly and leaves no footprints.

BREEZES BLOW—And you can have them coming from the outside in, or from the inside out! William H. Martin, President of Appliances, Inc., demonstrates reversible feature of famed Atlas-Aire "Portabout" Window Fan. Howard Brown, right, is the company's sales manager, and here you see him in the midst of other leading lines represented by Appliances, Inc. Read story on this page.

Ventilating Equipment Sold by Appliances, Inc

There are more ways than one to keep cool! And visible proof is the greatly diversified array of ventilating equipment which is distributed by Appliances, Inc. The Atlanta firm is located at 501 Stewart Ave. and has branches in Savannah and Albany.

William H. Martin, who is president of the distributing company, states that major emphasis this year is definitely on ventilating equipment which is designed to provide complete circulation of air. One of the country's moset advanced instruments of this type is the Welch "Air Flight" Circulator, which comes in three models, for home, business and industrial office cooling.

Because of its plastic construction, the "Air Flight" circulator (shown underneath hand of Mr. Brown in picture) is remarkably strong. The patented, louver-rings, in addition to directing the flow of cooling air all around the room or office, completely enclose the fan blades and guard against accidents. The "Air Flight" produces more cubic feet of cooling air per minute than several ordinary fans the same size.

Its quiet, gust-free performance, plus its modern, smart appearance has made this Welch "Air Flight" Circulator the ideal choice for executive and professional offices.

Welch's portable "Air Flight" Window fan may be used as an exhaust or intake fan. It has twin motors, provides six cooling speeds. Amazingly light in weight, installation can be made instantly, without tools or drilling. . . . Adjustable slides permit use in windows from 27 inches up to 43 inches wide. For casement windows, the fan is hung directly to window screen and fits windows as small as 18 inches wide. For that reason it is particularly popular in apartments.

Vice President in charge of sales for Appliances, Inc. is J. H. Brown. Because of his many years in the ventilating field, Mr. Brown's high appraisal of the new Atlas-Aire models swings considerable influence with dealers throughout the State. Newest development by this leading maker is the Atlas-Aire "Port-About," a triple use portable window fan. Use it as a window exhaust fan to blow out inside hot air, or as an intake fan to draw cool outside breezes indoors. Finally, move it to any room in the house and use as an air circulator. Just turn a handle and the Atlas-Aire is installed. No screws or bolts needed; fits windows up to 42 inches wide and window may be opened or closed without removing fan.

The country's biggest selling window exhaust fan is also the Atlas-Aire straight exhaust models which come in 16-inch and 20-inch sizes with three-speed switches.

They have the same patented installation features as the "Port-About." Atlas-Aire's new 24-inch House Cooler moves 5,100 cubic feet of air per minute, and the Atlas-Aire "Economy" Kitchen Fan at $18.95 is an ideal, low-cost ventilator. This manufacturer's high and low pedestal type fans are also outstanding values.

Appliances, Inc., are also distributors for Schwitzer-Cummins and Silent Breeze attic ventilating fans, and for the nationally famous line of Knapp-Monach electric fans. A leader in the industry is K-M's 16-inch window exhaust fan which retails for only $29.95. In conventional type electric fans, Knapp-Monarch produces 8-inch, 10-inch and 12-inch models, oscillating and non-oscillating. Prices start at $5.95.

These various models, which represent the very latest developments in ventilating equipment, may be purchased from retail dealers throughout Georgia. For descriptive literature, and name of dealer, if unknown, write to the distributor. Dealers interested in any or all lines are asked to contact Appliances, Inc., 501 Stewart Avenue.

SEVEN THOUSAND SEE KENNESTONE HOSPITAL DEDICATED

Kennestone Hospital Dedication Attended by 7,000 at Marietta

By BILL DIEHL

MARIETTA—Some 7,000 Georgians stood under a rain-threatening sky on the crest of Campbell Hill yesterday to hear Gov. Talmadge pay tribute to city, State and Federal authorities for creating reality from a dream.

The occasion was the dedication of the $1,500,000 Kennestone Hospital. Commending to the highest degree the co-operative work between City and County officials; civic groups, veterans organizations and "just plain people," the Governor's speech was the highlight of the dedication ceremonies.

One of the highlights of Talmadge's speech, however, was his unstinted praise of the Hill-Burton Act, passed by the 79th Congress, which made the new Marietta Hospital possible.

His praise for the law was not limited to a connection with the edifice. Talmadge also pointed out the State would invest $12,000,000 in new hospitals and health centers within the next four years under the terms of the act which provide Federal funds to hospital projects if they are matched by city and State donations.

The late Director of the State hospital service, John Ransom, who died only three days before his Kennestone dream became real, also received a lion's share of praise. Ransom, who stood behind the City's efforts to build the hospital almost from the beginning, died Thursday following an automobile accident.

The costly, 105-bed building was conceived almost five years ago by Marietta's former Mayor L. M. "Rip" Blair. But the project bogged down because of a lack of funds after almost a quarter-million dollars ha dgone into construction of the foundation.

A few years later, under the momentum of Marietta Mayor Sam J. Welch, plans for Kennestone were again revived, pushed through to State officials and finally became part of the State's Hill-Burton hospital expansion program.

Mariettans deserve much of the credit for the new building described as "a temple of healing for everybody." By underwriting over a third of the funds for the building and equipment, they will be paying off their $467,000 donation until 1974, when bonds and revenue certificates mature.

Many of the 5,000 new items of supply which help make the hospital one of the best equipped in the State came from Marietta's civic and social clubs and fraternities. The intricate and shiny new pieces of equipment bore signs announcing they were dedicated by the Civitan Club or the Woman's Club or the Sons of Kennesaw Lodge 33.

The people of the city also aided Hospital Administrator Walter T. Altmann in yesterday's ceremony. Both civic and patriotic organization members acted as hosts and hostesses during the hospital inspection tour which followed the ceremony.

Named after the Kennesaw Mountain to the north and Stone Mountain to the south, the streamlined, cream-colored, three-story building has provisions for every kind of emergency or operation. It also has a fully equipped laundry, its own heating unit, the latest type of maternity wards and equipment, special children's and private rooms, and a special Negro ward.

Talmadge said Georgia's participation in the hospital program is the "greatest single achievement" of his Administration.

The Governor declared:

"Even though the Hill-Burton Act had been in operation over three years, Georgia did not participate in it until I went into office in November, 1948."

Under the act, the Federal Government contributes to State and local funds for erection of hospitals.

In the case of the Kennestone Hospital, the State provided $350,000, the community $467,000 and the Federal Government $409,000.

"The State of Georgia put up $6,000,000 at the outset to institute this (hospital) program," said Talmadge, "and we have another $3,000,000 which will become available July 1.

"The $6,000,000 we have already made available in State funds has made it possible for us to let to contract a total of 59 new hospitals and health centers. They are going up all over Georgia. They cost a total, so far, of $21,000,000.

"The co-operative hospital and health center construction program has four more years to run. We will appropriate $3,000,000 each year during the coming four years . . ."

The Governor said this "means that we will have a net gain of over 5,000 hospital beds at the end of the seven-year building program."

Talmadge added that the hospital plan is one of "several major programs in Georgia" that should be carried out "by the exclusion of factional or political influences."

Legion Men Dig in To Hold Lawson

Legionnaires from the Atlanta area have laid long-range plans to continue their fight against a government order that would close Lawson Hospital and halt the building of a new Veterans Administration Hospital here.

Meeting in their annual convention, members of the American Legion from the Fifth District agreed to oppose the closing of Lawson until "the new hospital planned for the Candler property on Briarcliff Road is completed." The group sent a man to Washington just after the closing order was disclosed to talk to Georgia Congressmen and Senators.

Rep. James C. Davis was speaker at dedication exercises Saturday of Post 51's new house. He warned Legionnaires to be on guard against Communist infiltration into this country and urged them to support a program of national preparedness.

During yesterday's session, held at East Point Post No. 51, Elmer L. Barfield, Jr., was elected Commander of the Fifth District. Jim Shaw was elected Senior Vice Commander and Charles Meyers and George Glasgo were named Junior Vice Commanders.

Nine delegates were chosen for the next national convention: M. B. Coalson, R. K. Whiteford, W. P. Hardy, Joe White, Basil Stockbridge, Madge Cooper, Johnny Vickers, A. E. Luke, and Margaret Giles.

Rains Save $500,000 In Crops

Constitution State News Service

SANDERSVILLE—Rains of the past few days have meant more than $500,000 to farmers in Washington County, Sanders Mercer, County Agent, revealed today.

Branches, creeks and surface wells that had become dry are now filled with water and farmers who have been hauling water fof their stock are jubilant.

Cotton and corn, planted six weeks ago has germinated nicely and only a few isolated spots will replanting be necessary.

The vast peach orchard, containing 100,000 trees, which was saved from frosts by use of smudge pots last month, looks promising.

During the past two weeks the trees shed large amounts of peaches that had died for lack of moisture. Following the rains this menace stopped and the fruit has taken on a lusty growth.

First shipment of early peaches is expected within two weeks, but they will be smaller than usual due to drouth. The later varieties will be harvested in June and July.

Elbertas will predominate with those going to market in July and August. Today it looks like a normal crop will be produced, Mercer declared.

18,000 Will Receive County Relief in 1950

By FRANK MAJORS

Every Fulton County resident has a $11.60 pro rata share in this year's public welfare expenditures.

But the estimated 510,000 persons won't all participate in the anticipated 1950 budget of $5,981,000 to be distributed by the County Department of Public Welfare.

As it stands now, the amount will be split among some 18,000 persons, some 10,020 of theim being 65 years of age or older, whose payments totalled $276,155,50.

Second largest group receiving aid are dependent children. Presently some 2,502 cases involving 6,317 children are dividing $122,211.50 monthly.

These two items reflect the only appreciable increase over the comparative month of April last year. Then 9,553 persons received old age checks and 4,692 children were on aid rolls.

The April, 1949 payments in either instance ranged within a few cents of the average last month: $27.56 for the old age recipient; $19.35 per child.

The growth in these items alone almost accounts for the current budget rise over last year's total distribution of $5,592,000.

Welfare Director Harold Parker attributes the larger number seeking aid to the influx of population to urban areas, and liberalization of policies by Federal and State agencies, who finance 96 percent of the case load.

Policies followed now, he explains, do not allow the old age benefit to be withheld because of the ability of a child to support his parents. Similarly, a husband is not responsible for his stepchild's support in cases of abandonment. In addition, a mother may work part-time and receive help in supporting her children.

In the other assistance program shared by the three governments—aid to needy blind—the situation has remained fairly static. Currently some 298 individuals are receiving $9,448 as compared to 291 last April who received $9,232.50.

A popular misconception reportedly exists in viewing the direct relief program which is financed by County funds.

Parker does not consider straight relief as a good barometer of current economic conditions. He pointed out a slump must be of long duration to exhaust the worker's eligibility for unemployment payments, which his department does not handle.

This is apparent when it is noted the April direct relief case load of 1,027 shows a drop from 1,108 persons last year. However, monthly payments increased from $18.44 to $19.70.

Hiking Reporter Gives Hints On Beating Trolley Lack

By BILL BORING

In this "Jet But Trolleyless Age" may it be accurately recorded that people still can walk.

In wobbly, but nonetheless conclusive, fashion, I have just demonstrated this by hoofing it to work from my home in Morningside. Distance, five miles; time, an hour and a half.

A WAY TO BEAT STRIKE
Bill Boring Hiking To Work . . .

It was not my idea. It was the Managing Editor's. He went to bat in the interest of scientific experimentation and 300,000 grounded bus riders.

I was to determine if motor-minded man had allowed his ambulatory equipment to atrophy beyond anything more than incidental use and at the same time sort of lay down a "yardstick" for anyone who might be thinking of walking to work during the predicted lengthy trolley strike.

I can now report that by adopting an easy, smooth gait man can cover about three miles an hour; that if the hike is no more than four miles, it's an enjoyable lark.

You discover new and interesting things about your City walking, you run across old acquaintances and are entertained by quaint bits of architecture along the route and interesting items in the shop windows. Moreover, you feel better for your exercise.

No Corrigan who'd fly the Atlantic with only a map of the world as a guide, I sought expert briefing before beginning my bold venture. I went to the Boy Scouts of America for advice.

L. H. Traylor, Field Scout Executive, reached for the Boys' Handbook, the "Bible" of hikers. It laid down the rules for enjoyable walking.

First thing you do is trim your toe nails, being certain that they are trimmed straight and not rounded. This insures against toe nail irritation.

Then wash your feet. Once this is done, select two pairs of sox, preferably woolen ones. Wear one on the hike and when you get to work switch to the other pair. This leaves your feet rested.

Your clothing should be loose and your shoes thick-soled. Never wear thin-soled shoes and by all means avoid sneakers.

Now you are ready to set out. Chin up and toes forward. Always, toes forward and not outward. You'll save yourself 100 steps per mile by pointing them straight.

Reach forward with the toes and come down lightly on the heels as you walk. This insures a smooth, non-tiring gait.

Hum a familiar tune as you walk. This helps pass the time and keeps your mind off serious things.

At the end of a half hour stop and blow. Like a horse. Don't tarry, though, more than five minutes. Any longer and your muscles will begin getting stiff.

These are the rules for enjoyable walking. I followed them and found them good. And not once along the route did I feel like cheating — hailing a "Courtesy Car," for example.

Hobo Jungle Yields Body Of Man, 65

Atlanta homicide detectives today were investigating the death of a 65-year-old man whose partially-clad body was found in a "hobo jungle" in the rear of 99 Milton Ave.

The man, identified by fingerprints as George Hart, of a Windsor St., S. W., address, had been dead for "about a week," police said. An autopsy performed last night revealed the man's death probably resulted from natural causes, detectives said.

However, two men were being held as material witnesses.

Detained was Charles Bailey, 57, who told police he lived in the woods with Hart, but that he had not seen the man for two days. Police said Bailey's statement was "doubtful because the condition of the body indicated the man had been dead at least a week." Also held was R. W. Plaster, 65, who denied any knowledge of Hart but had in his possession a walking cane identified as belonging to Hart.

A coroner's jury was impaneled.

DON'T FORGET RETURN ADDRESS

Correct Address Will Insure Efficient Delivery of Mail

By MARJORY SMITH

"Dear Miz Lula," the letter began, in scrawled characters made by a pencil bearing down hard on rough blue-lined tablet paper, "I need yure help to git my Rufus out of jail."

Often, clerks in the Dead Letter Branch of the Atlanta Post Office speculate on whether Rufus ever got out of jail.

The plaintive missive, with its tantalizing hints of Rufus' plight, came in a plain envelope addressed to "Miz Lula Miller, Atlanta, Ga" There was no return address, and the letter was signed "Mary."

It joined the Texas horned toad frogs and wedding invitations, baby snapshots and automobile tires, love letters and cash that wend their way to the basement of the New Post Office.

Dead Letter Branch Foreman H. R. Porterwood estimates 200,000 letters from all over Georgia, except for the cities of Columbus, Macon, Augusta, and Savannah, which operate their own branches, are handled annually.

The Atlanta branch also is final destination of "dead or lost in the mails" parcels from Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, South Carolina, and Florida.

Several times a year, Atlanta Clerk-Auctioneer Horace Wright intones his "going . . . going . . . gone," over hand-painted china, teething-rings, tractor-parts, and musical combs from a year's harvest of around 25,000 parcels.

"Just name it; we have it!" Dead Letter Branch clerks aver.

Porterwood defines a "dead letter" as one unable to be delivered or returned. Under the new Congress-ordered Post Office curtailment program, clerks in regular mail departments are no longer authorized to search the City Directory to supplement incomplete addresses.

But when such mail comes down from the "nixies" upstairs, Porterwood and clerks make every effort to "revive" it. As a last resort, letters are opened to see whether there is a return address inside. In that case, the letter is returned to the sender with the Dead Letter Branch's red-stamped notation.

When a letter includes a check, Porterwood will get in touch with the bank to see that it is returned to the sender.

"You'd be surprised how many people will scrawl out a check for a bill due their local drug store, put it in an envelope with no return address, and mail it to, say, just 'Corner Pharmacy, Atlanta', " he sighs.

If you've ever lost a parcel in the mails between points in the five states, the Dead Letter Branch's meticulously-kept files can tell you almost at a glance if it is—or has been—there.

Merchandise, even to photographer's prints, is labeled painstakingly and the label entered in a permanent ledger. Contents of unwrapped parcels, with the sole exception of perishable goods, are kept in lockers for 60 days before being auctioned off to the highest bidders.

Undeliverable cash is filed with the Post Office Cashier's Office awaiting claimants for a full year. If none are forthcoming after 12 months, it goes into the Post Office's treasury.

Such perishable items as day-old chicks or shubbery are sold to local buyers. Candy goes free to veterans' hospitals here.

Branch officials make "every human effort" to return those "mystery" letters and parcels. They don't claim to be infallible.

Recently an Atlanta Constitution executive discovered a letter addressed to him, omitting the street number, had been opened, stamped by the Dead Letter Branch, and returned to the sender. The sender put the whole thing into another envelope, addressed it exactly as before—and this time it was delivered!

Housing Plan

Constitution State News Service

CARROLLTON—A discussion of a Government housing project for Carrollton will be the topic for discussion at the June 5 meeting of the Mayor and City Council, it was announced by Mayor J. Hubert Griffin. The project, which would be divided into two sections for white and colored, would be for local citizens of low income.

Moultrie 'Hangs' Weevil In Mock Execution

Constitution State News Service

MOULTRIE—Colquitt Countains turned out in sizable numbers here to see a huge, ugly replica of a boll weevil hanged and then poisoned in effigy.

And, judging from scattered comments following the mock execution, cotton growers in this section have "only begun to fight" in an all-out assault on the merciless weevil.

Leading cotton men have expressed deep concern over the high survival rate of the weevil. An examination of a cotton field in this County a few days ago indicated an average infestation of 8,000 weevils per acre.

The idea of underscoring the boll weevil threat by a public hanging and poisoning was concocted. W. E. Aycock, widely known agriculture leader, fashioned the five-foot image of a weevil around a wire frame, covered with cotton padding and an outer "skin" of heavy cloth. The weevil, complete with bulging eyes and a protruding snout, was authentically painted.

In conjunction with the execution, a downtown parade featured modern poisoning equipment following by prosperous-appearing cotton growers in trucks loaded with cotton bales. A dilapidated one-horse wagon driven by a ragged grower who had a scant pile of cotton to show for his efforts, depicted what might happen if the weevil isn't curbed.

A second phase of the program was formal dedication of the State Farmers' Market here. The parade moved from the downtown area to the market, where Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Tom Linder delivered the principal address.

Linder, introduced by Dorsey Matthews, President of the Colquitt County Farm Bureau, told farmers he planned to develop additional facilities at the Moultrie market.

Included in these were cold storage facilities and teletype connections between this market and other major ones in the system.

Although the market here has been in operation for sometime, formal dedication was postponed until appropriate ceremonies could be arranged.

Injured in Hospital

A hospital is not always the safest place in which to work, a Grady Hospital nurse learned yesterday. Katherine Christopherson, 25, was treated for foot injuries she received when a heavy X-ray machine struck her foot.

'Cyclist Grounded

Ten-year-old Tyrus Ward, of 447 Erin St., S. W., was taking the trolley strike in stride until he met up with two Negro juveniles, police said. Young Ward was accosted by the two Negroes as he rode his bicycle to a store on an errand for his mother. The Negroes pushed him from the vehicle and rode away with young Ward's only means of transportation.

Forrestal's Grave Calls Grateful Johnson Today

By AUSTIN STEVENS
Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON—With no formal ceremony—in his lifetime he dreaded all pomp—friends of the late James Forrestal, first Secretary of Defense, will pay private tribute today to the quiet devoted man whose selflessness cost him his life.

Singly and in small groups, friends of Mr. Forrestal will honor his memory at a grave in Arlington National Cemetery.

Among the Government officials who will visit the plainly marked grave on an oak-surrounded knoll beneath the Lee Mansion and overlooking the Potomac River will be Louis Johnson, Mr. Forrestal's successor in the then controversy-torn military establishment. Johnson, who often tells of his debt to Mr. Forrestal in introducing him realistically to the problems he would confront in attempting to achieve unification, will place a wreath on the grave of the first Secretary of Defense in the nation's history.

Mr. Forrestal's widow, who has been in Europe, will pay a visit to the grave, Number 674, in an officer section of the nation's resting place for its heroes.

A year ago today, Mr. Forrestal plunged to his death from a room in the National Naval Medical Center at Methesda, Md., where he had for several months been undergoing treatment for a severe depression that physicians likened to battle fatigue. He had resigned as Secretary of Defense March 28, physically and mentally broken from the exhausting regimen he set for himself in attempting to solve the Armed Forces differences and to provide for the nation's security.

At the head of Mr. Forrestal's grave is a three-and-a-half-foot plain marble marker. The inscription states his birth date—Feb. 15, 1892, the date of death, and the words, "Lt., U. S. N. R. S. World War I."

Friends have not waited for the anniversary of his death to pay a pilgrimage. A few days ago Lewis Strauss, who recently resigned as one of the five members of the Atomic Energy Commission, visited Arlington.

He told of finding the marble marker, replacing the original wooden headboard that had been set there the day of Mr. Forrestal's funeral, amid the similar stones that "mark the serried legions of private soldiers and sailors in all our cemeteries."

STUDENT RUNS 22 MILES—SET FOR 43 MORE

DUE WEST, S. C.—(AP)—Bill McCauley, 22, of Montreat, N. C., a senior at Erskine College here, ran 22 miles from Anderson to Due West yesterday afternoon in three hours and six minutes. Why? He likes to run and just wanted to see whether he could do it.

He wore tennis shoes, shorts and a windbreaker. He started at 2:05 p. m. and didn't stop until he arrived here.

He said he was pretty tired for the first half of the distance, but learned to pace himself better on the second half.

He didn't eat on the way, but wolfed a hearty supper at the end of the run.

Erskine doesn't have a track team. Macauley said that last Summer he ran 17 miles down Mt. Mitchell, and as a boy he liked to run on his uncle's farm in Huntersville, N. C.

He said that next month he might try to run from Greenville to Due West, 43 miles.

Human Rights Bill Boosted By Mrs. FDR

NEW YORK—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said last night if the Senate ratifies the United Nations covenant on human rights "it will be the first step of encouragement in the struggle between Communism and Democracy."

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke at a Waldorf Astoria Hotel dinner during which she was awarded a gold medal for meritorious service to the underprivileged.

The award and dinner were sponsored by the Williamsburg Settlement of Brooklyn.

Defeat of the Fair Employment Practices bill in the Senate last week, she said, advesely affected this country's world position and its struggle against Communism.

Clare Boothe Luce, former Republican Congresswoman, said that Mrs. Roosevelt "has done more good deeds on a bigger scale, for a longer time, than any woman who ever appeared on our public scene.

"No woman has ever so comforted the distressed—or distressed the comfortable," Mrs. Luce said.

Baltic Fliers Held By Reds-Bracken

HOUSTON, Texas—(UP)—Cmdr. John Bracken, USNR, President of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States, said yesterday he believed the Russians were holding as prisoners some of the crew members of the U. S. Navy Privateer plane shot down in the Baltic.

Bracken made his statement in an address to the Texas Department of the Reserve Officers' Association Saturday night, and added yesterday it was "commonly believed" that at least part of the crew survived because a life raft was found with "hand prints" on it.

Was Kilroy There? Sen. Myers Wasn't

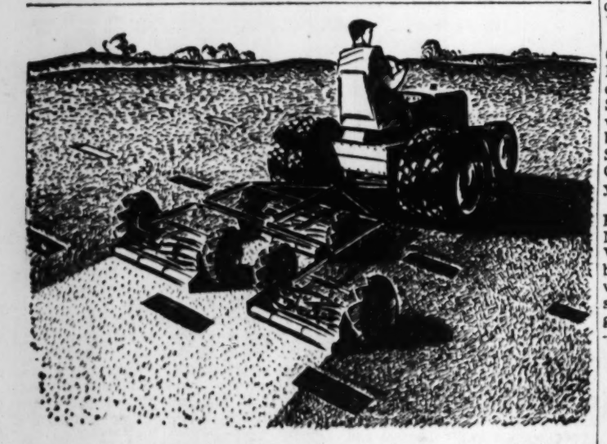

CONSHOHOCKEN, Pa.—(AP) — Pennsylvania's Gov. James H. Duff was invited to speak during the celebration marking this community's 100th birthday anniversary.

The Governor was unable to make it at the last minute and State Sen. Lloyd Wood substituted as the speaker last week.

When Wood finished his address, the Chairman arose and said:

"We thank you very much, Senator Myers."

U. S. Sen. Myers, Democrat, Pennsylvania, was not present.

THEY CUT THE COST OF CUTTING GRASS

. . . by asking you to cut out sentiment

It has always been part of American living to honor its dead with distinctive memorials of granite or marble.

But now the Memorial Park Cemetery says, "NO."

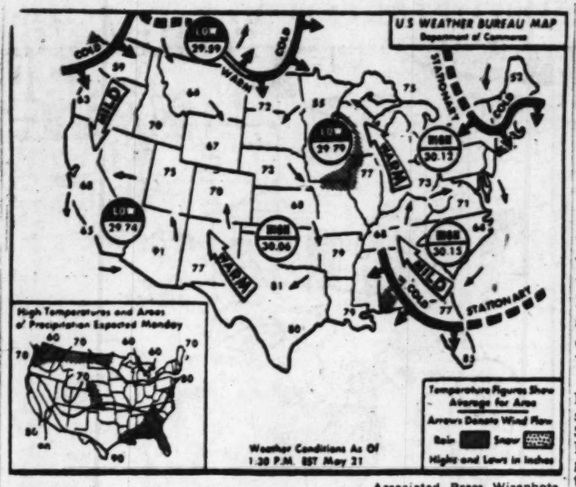

They require you to purchase metal markers set level with the ground. They forbid you to honor your loved ones with a monument of your choice.

Why?

One of the reasons is they can quickly mow right over a row of level markers. That saves them money.

Before you decide which cemetery is best for your family burial estate, ask yourself, "Is it worthwhile for me to sacrifice sentiment so somebody else can save on the cost of cutting grass?"

Man Admits 1921 Slaying In Georgia

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An itinerant painter walked into police headquarters here yesterday and said he had slain a man in Georgia in 1921.

The painter gave the name of Harris L. Doke, and said the victim was Jordan Rowe.

Doke told police he hit Rowe over the head with a rock, found he was dead and threw his body into the Flint River. He said Rowe had been too friendly with Mrs. Doke.

Chief of Police Frank Sims, of Thomaston, Ga., said Rowe's body was taken from the Flint River in 1921.

The Chief said "the doctor who examined him at that time found some marks on his head that looked like violence." But Rowe's relatives, the Post quoted Sims as saying, declined to permit an autopsy.

Chief Sims and Deputy Sheriff G. T. Gill, of Upson County in Georgia, reopened the investigation of the Rowe death upon being advised of Doke's story.

No charges were placed against Doke.

Tobin, Murray Assail 'Communist'-Led UE

LYNN, Mass.—(AP) — Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin and CIO Pres. Phillip Murray yesterday denounced the independent United Electrical Workers' Union as "Communist dominated."

Tobin and Murray spoke at a rally of General Electric workers prior to a National Labor Relations Board election set for Thursda yto choose a bargaining agent for GE employees throughout the country.

"This is not an issue of trade unionism," Tobin declared, "but of basic Americanism. From 1937 to 1950 the UE leaders made a whole series of mistakes, all of them anti-American mistakes."

The Labor Secretary said the issue was not local but "a question of whether a vital industry will be in the hands of Americans or friends of Soviet Russia."

YOUR STARS TODAY

WHAT TO EXPECT TODAY
Sun in Gemini

General Tendencies—Business may be slow this week, due to several planetary reasons. One of the best ways to get around some of the unexpected obstacles is to give extra attention to all details, particularly anything which may be in writing or print. People born near the second week in May will be affected at this time and should not push themselves too hard unless they want to meet with opposition and possible accident. This date is best for those whose birthdates fall in the last of July or in early April.

If It's Your Birthday—Evidently the last couple of months have disturbed your income in some way. Beginning your new year from today, because the birthday starts the year for the individual, you may expect a Summer with fairly lively dates, then an Autumn which may prove slow. Old conditions will work out in an agreeable way beginning next December, so have patience enough to wait. Your old friends may look better to you in 1951 than they do at this moment, and you may be attracted to people much older than yourself.

CIO Left-Wing Purge Approaches Completion

Maritime Union Hearing To Follow Bridges Case

Only three of 12 unions originally slated for purge action remain to be hailed before special hearing committees on charges they followed the Communist line in defiance of CIO policy.

Two West Coast Maritime unions are to be heard this week following windup of the case against Harry Bridges' Longshoremen. A hearing is scheduled for the Marine Cooks and Stewards today. The Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union goes before a hearing committee on Thursday.

A hearing in the Fur and Leather Workers' case is set for June 1. It was postponed from April 19 because the union, headed by Communist Ben Gold, wanted to consider the matter at its national meeting which opens today at Atlantic City.

The CIO hopes a fourth union—the Furniture Workers—will clean its own house during a showdown convention beginning June 5 at Chicago.

Thus the end is in sight for the anti-Red drive started last Fall after the CIO amended its constitution to deny affiliation to any Communist-dominated union.

The CIO convention booted out two unions, the huge United Electrical Workers and the smaller Farm Equipment Workers. Neither put up a real fight and both promptly merged into a single union.

Then the CIO scheduled hearings on charges against the remaining 10, four of which were expelled following hearings. Two other cases still are pending.

Mystery Shots Kill 1, Hurt 2 In Boston

BOSTON—(UP)—A South Boston man was killed and two companions were wounded, one critically, early yesterday in a mysterious shooting fray in the North End.

Police Supt. Edward W. Fallon said he did not know whether the shooting was an outbreak of gang warfare. He said the dead man, George Killeen, 30, was known to have been a bookmaker.

Gerald Crimmins, 30, was hospitalized in critical condition with a bullet near his heart. The third victim, Daniel F. Millett, 34, was shot in the buttocks.

In an unusual move, Fallon and Police Commissioner Thomas F. Sullivan were called to the scene just three blocks from Precinct One Headquarters.

The shooting occurred about 5:10 a. m., EDT, outside a Hanover Street restaurant. A block away on Endicott Street police found two .38-caliber revolvers.

ATTENTION, HOUSEWIVES!

OUR COMPANY learned years ago that there are thousands of mothers and housewives who have 3, 4 or 5 hours each day that they would like to utilize in doing something constructive and at the same time supplement their family income. In view of this, we are proud to say that we can offer such an opportunity to several ladies in Fulton, DeKalb, Cobb, Clayton and Gwinnett Counties. This work is pleasant, it pays good, and allows one to work in their own community. We have a district office nearby and there is an excellent opportunity for advancement. The only requirement, is willingness to work. For further details write Mrs. Carolyn Adams, Box 269, Gastonia, N. C.

WE KNOW that your family comes first and that is as it should be, however, we would like to help you use those few idle hours each day and turn them into dollars. Write me today for full details.

TODAY IN RADIO AND TV

Air Georgia's Share In World Trade

By RITA VAN PELT

A special program commemorating World Trade Week will be heard on WCON at 8:45 tonight. The broadcast, planned by the local office of the U. S. Department of Commerce, will consist of a round-table discussion on the subject: "World Trade—How It Affects Georgia."

John S. Correll, head of the Atlanta Office of International Trade, will act as moderator. Outstanding businessmen to take part in the discussion are Edwin S. Byrd, assistant sales and traffic manager of Eastern Air Lines; Thomas S. Morgan, President, Pan-American League and Chairman, Action Committee Atlanta World Trade Council; W. A. Shaeffer, export manager, Scripto, Inc., and Gordon Siefkin, Dean, School of Business Administration at Emory University.

'Double Thomas' Sings

Selections from the Rodgers-Hammerstein hit, "Carousel," will be aired by Thomas L. Thomas when he guest solos on the WSB-NBC Voice of Firestone at 8:30 tonight. The orchestra will perform Prokofieff's March from "The Love of Three Oranges."

Jolson Is Jolson

For a change and strictly to prove his versatility, Al Jolson will play the role of Al Jolson when the Lux Radio Theater presents "Jolson Sings Again" over WAGA-CBS at 9 tonight. Barbara Hale and William Demarest will appear with Jolson playing their original screen roles.

Mystery Masterpiece

A masterpiece of dramatic suspense is "The Line Is Dead," tonight's thriller slated for Mutual's Murder At Midnight broadcast which you'll hear on WGST at 9:30. The story deals with the effort to escape from a situation from which the only escape is a telephone . . . and the line is dead.

We all know the extreme tension of waiting for a letter that never comes. That's why "Patrolman," tonight's Crime Fighters broadcast coming up on WGST at 8:30, will spellbind mystery listeners.

Crocker's Guest

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., will describe the parties and the celebrities who were entertained in his home—the plush Vanderbilt mansion on Fifth Avenue in New York which was razed this year—when he visits Betty Crocker over WCON-ABC at 10:30 this morning.

Congratulations

Our congratulations to Mary Jane Minor, a radio veteran at the ripe old age of 10. She celebrates her first anniversary this month with her own program on station WTJH.

Our congratulations to "Corky" Henrikson who recently received a specially tailored "Spiedel" dog collar made by the watch band firm.

TV Talk

An ex-GI, whose hearing was affected during the war, becomes engaged in an eerie conversation with a mouse whose recessive personality makes him something of a misfit during "The Silent Voice," tonight's Lights Out drama on WSB-TV at 9.

Ilona Massey, an "Iphiler" (apologies to Parts Pups) if there ever was one, will have the leading role in WAGA-TV's Studio One's production, "The Ambassadors" at 7 this p. m.

Your Mind's Mirror

By LAWRENCE GOULD
Consulting Psychologist

Should a child prefer reading to play?

Answer: Certainly not. Modern educators feel a child should not learn to read too young because of the danger of its interfering with his interest in play and other children. It is true, there have been little "bookworms" who have shown exceptional intelligence as adults, but don't let the fact that your child prefers curling up with a book to playing with other youngsters fool you into thinking him a budding genius. It's more likely that he's having trouble getting on with children of his own age, and taking the easy "way out."

Should a doctor's wife be jealous?

Answer: No—A girl who is inclined to be jealous should not marry a man whose profession involves often seeing so many other women. But a doctor's wife is only a particularly vivid illustration of a fact which every wife must face, sooner or later; namely, that she cannot possibly prevent her husband's seeing and occasionally meeting other women who are prettier and younger than she is. The one tie a wife can count on is the personal affection her husband feels for her, but this can be strong enough to "hold" him against all other attractions.

Are older people "culturally starved?"

Answer: Yes, says Thomas Whiteside in an article in The Reporter. There is an increasing tendency to "pre-test" not only movies and radio and television programs, but books by trying them out on "sample" audiences to insure their popular appeal. But most of the tests are aimed at "younger markets" because the purchasing power of people over 45 begins to drop off and their buying habits are so well established that they are hard to change. As a result, no one bothers catering to the tastes of 45 million older people.

Segregation, Oil Cases Still Face High Court

Justices Skip Decision To Work on Score of Cases

WASHINGTON—(UP)—The Supreme Court headed into the windup of its 1949-50 Fall-Spring term yesterday with two controversial issues still hanging fire—racial segregation and the Gulf of Mexico tidelands oil dispute.

AMERICAN IN PASSION PLAY—Johnny McMahon, left, six-year-old American boy, has his hair fixed by his brother, Patrick, 5, in preparation for his role in the Passion Play at Oberammergau, Germany. Johnny's father, Maj. J. A. McMahon, of Boise, Idaho, who is with the American forces is stationed at Oberammergau.

SUPREME COURT

The Justices will skip the usual "decision day" today to work on a score or more of opinions. They hope to get them out of the way and adjourn on June 5 until October. In any event, they will have handed down about 100 decisions during the term.

The race and oil-lands cases were left until the end of the session so that Justice William O. Douglas could help decide them. Douglas was away from the bench from October until March recovering from a horseback riding accident.

On the race issue the Court either could renounce or reaffirm its 54-year-old doctrine that segregation of Negroes and whites is legal as long as both receive "equal treatment." But there also is the possibility the Court will skirt the question by disposing of the cases on technical grounds.

Three Negroes have asked the Justices to toss out the 1896 decision.

Elmer W. Henderson, director of the American Council on Human Rights, is fighting for an end to segregation in railroad dining cars. He was denied a seat on a Southern Railway diner because of his race while a member of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Two other Negroes are challenging segregation in State-supported universities. They are Heman Marion Sweatt, who was denied admission to the University of Texas law School, and G. W. McLaurin, who is attending the University of Oklahoma graduate school on a segregated basis.

Southern States have told the Court the school system in the South would be thrown into chaos if they did not retain their "police power" to separate the races.

The oil case is another chapter in the long fight between the States and the Federal Government over oil-rich deposits lying off shore. The Court has ruled that the Federal Government has "paramount" rights to oil lands off the California Coast.

The business world also is eagerly awaiting a Court ruling on the right of a wholesaler to quote diferent prices to customers in the same area if he is trying to meet competition. The question was taken the Court by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Another case involves the right of an alien convicted by Army tribunals overseas to call on the Federal Courts to test the legality of his imprisonment. Twenty-one Germans now in Landsberg prison, Germany, brought the issue before the High Court. Its decision will afect thousands of aliens held in former enemy countries.

RetiredEmployees Plan Delayed

Plans for enlarging the Atlanta chapter of the National Association of Retired Civil Employees are to be delayed, it was decided at a meeting yesterday in the Capitol Office Building.

The group, beset by transportation difficulties, only half of the 40 members were present at the meeting. The next meeting was called for Saturday, June 17, in a third-floor courtroom of the Fulton County Courthouse.

George H. Thomas, one of the members, said that the meeting was called to gather in more of the City's retired civil service people. There are believed to be more than 500 in Atlanta, he said.

The Atlanta Urban League held its thirtieth annual meeting yesterday and set plans to build a "new Atlanta."

Principal speaker at the annual meeting was Philip Hammer, director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission, who explained the work of the Commission and some of the problems that would face both his group and the Urban League.

Mayor Hartsfield also spoke on the City's efforts to provide ample housing in the Atlanta area. The League is currently working on neighborhood development and housing projects.

More than 250 citizens from all sections of Atlanta attended the meeting. It was held in Davage Auditorium at Clark College.

Forty of the fraternity members contributed one pint of blood each to the Red Cross Blood Bank, topping contributions of other campus groups. Frank Gordy, Tech alumnus, center, donated the trophy. A total of 109 pints of blood were given by Tech groups in a single day. TEP won because it gave the greatest amount in proportion to membership. H. A. Koritz was in charge of recruiting.

Wife of Vice Sleuth Kidnaped, Released

Pretty Oklahoman Borne Away In Nude; Maniac Is Suspected

OKLAHOMA CITY—(AP)—Mrs. Jo Alice Raper, 23, kidnaped wife of a police vice squad officer, was released unharmed by her abductors late last night at a suburban filling station.

Her husband Vice Squad Officer C. V. Raper and two detectives met her at the station.

Mrs. Raper said she was kidnaped from her home by two men, about 43 and 20 years old.

She was not molested but was held captive in a room somewhere in Oklahoma City all day.

Her husband said his wife told him she was guarded all day by a woman.

Just an hour before Mrs. Raper's release, her husband received two telephone calls at home saying his wife would be released.

One caller said she would be left at her home—another gave a location at N.W., Sixteenth St. and Portland Avenue.

First checks at the Portland Avenue place failed to locate Mrs. Raper. She was let out there later and notified her husband.

Officers earlier said a kidnaper had overpowered the pretty woman in her bedroom early Sunday and carried her away in the nude to get revenge on her husband.

Lt. Wayne Harbolt, of the police homicide force, said Raper got a telephone call only yesterday afternoon and heard his wife screaming.

The caller hung up before the call could be traced.

Officer Raper told fellow policemen he had received several threatening telephone calls last week. They were followed by a note which said in part:

"Get this straight and stay out of my business or that woman will have to take your punishment."

The officer is assigned to the police gambling detail.

Raper said he found this note in the bedroom:

"How do you like this Mr. Raper. Is afrid?"

Hilbert said he believed the kidnaper is an illiterate maniac.

Raper said, "I can't think of anyone who would do such a deed. I don't know where to start the investigation."

The officer said his wife kept a shotgun loaded at her bedside and had fired at prowlers several nights ago.

Friends described her as exceptionally attractive.

Jail Instead of Fines For Detroit Reckless

By WALTER W. RUCH

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

DETROIT—Reckless drivers are going to jail in Detroit under a new "get tough" policy in the traffic court that is producing startling results.

The policy, one of substituting short prison sentences for fines rather than waiting for new ordinances, will work in almost any city interested in traffic safety, according to Judge John D. Watts.

The effect of the policy on the movement of traffic over the city's busy streets—among the most congested in the nation—has been obvious, even to a casual observer, and on fatality records it has been startling.

During the period from May 7, when Judge Watts and Judge George T. Murphy began imposing sentences to the House of Correction in wholesale lots, through May 19, there was but a single traffic fatality in the fourth largest city in the nation.

During the first four months of the year there had been 69 deaths, making the rate for May 7-19 about one-ninth of what might have been expected.

"Five days in jail for reckless driving will do more to curb accidents than the stiffest fine," Judge Watts said.

The new policy was invoked on May 4, effective May 7, when the two judges noted that during the first four months of the year Detroit was the scene of 18,211 motor vehicle accidents, an increase of nearly 30 percent over the same period of 1949.

"Effective immediately," the jurists announced, "it will be the policy of this court to impose straight jail sentences and to suspend drivers' licenses for a minimum of 60 days in those cases where motorists are convicted of reckless driving under the State law, where speeding or drinking is a factor; where speeders are found guilty of driving 15 miles or more above the established limit in business and residential areas, and where persons are convicted of driving under the influence of intoxicating beverages."

Since then, Judges Watts and Murphy have sent more than 120 drivers to jail for terms of from five to 60 days. A year ago, about 12 of the worst offenders would have been jailed.

PEOPLE

By EARL WATSON

Compiled from Constitution Wire Reports

Frank Sinatra has lammed out of Spain and left the luscious Aya Gardner field to the amazing Toreador Mario Cabre. When Sinatra left London, he called the reported romantic triangle "a vicious lie." Arriving in New York yesterday, he clarified everything with a snappy "no comment." He's on his way to Hollywood to visit his wife Nancy, and their three children, properly enough, and first he will rehearse for a television program to be given with Bob Hope next Saturday. . . . Across Manhattan, Susan Reed, of the folk songs, and James Karen, actor, were married in Greenwich Village at the home of her parents. Since the newlyweds have been touring all season, they will spend their honeymoon in the Big Town.

Knew He's Coming

Her husband was home after 20 months' confinement by the Chinese Communists and it wasn't any time for winsome Shirley Bender, 25, to be cooking the dinner. So her mother and mother-in-law took over the kitchen and she and Elmer C. Bender and daughter, Kathy, dined together in Chicago after almost two tortured years. Whistling while he crossed the Erie railroad tracks was blamed for the death of James R. Potter, 18, at Avoca, N. Y. James was on the way to deliver a wedding present as a favor for a friend when he was struck by a westbound freight train. Steuben County Deputy Sheriff Theodore Kainer said the boy was whistling loudly as he walked with his head lowered and obviously wasn't aware of the approaching train.

Another Bust

Jane Russell is downright bored with her bosom, and yawns, too, at "The Outlaw." She murmured in Hollywood: "Aren't there any other topics of conversation besides bust and 'The Outlaw'? I'm bored with them." . . . There will be a pause for nominations. . . . "When 'Paleface' came out, everybody for got about 'The Outlaw.' But then 'The Outlaw' was released again," she sighed. And when Jane came out, everybody forgfot about 'The Outlaw' and 'The Paleface.' . . . Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan, of Pakistan, flew into Houston, Texas, in President Truman's plane. He and his wife were fresh from their first Los Angeles night club appearance. They had watched a midnight floor show at renowned Coconut Grove.

No Hot-Weather Thrush?

Margaret Truman will not sing this Summer, a business representative said. The President's daughter has asked cancellation of her July engagements at Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia and at the Lewisohn stadium in New York. This according to James Davidson, head of the New York agency which handles Miss Truman's concert appearances . . . her father learned from Moscow that he was trying to stir up new war hysteria in the U. S. celebration of Armed Forces Day. Pravda further barked: that the President gave synical praise to atomic weapons in a Washington address.

A Biting Oversight

Some false teeth were sealded within an inch of their life in Rochester, N. Y... Arriving in the nick of time to turn off a gas jet was a charwoman, conveyed pell-mell by a police car. Patrolman Albert Diamond got this explanation: "Before I went home, I promised the dentist I would put the false teeth on to boil for a little while. Then I forgot about it until I got home. I was afraid they might be damaged."

Banks On Fish

Sick unto death with cancer, U So Nyun, Burmese ambassador to Washington, rests his latest hopes on the freeing of 53 captive fish, one for each year of his life. In Rangoon, the Ambassador was adhering to the Buddhist belief that Buddha answers prayers that are accompanied by a charitable act. He was too ill to witness the ceremony, but blessed the fish which his relatives released in Mokine Lake. . . . Around Brookville, N. Y. they hunted all Saturday night for five-year-old Chris Lihme after he disappeared from his home. The next day they found him feeling no pain in a neighbor's garage. Plumb asleep. . . . Why did he skip? "I was following a pony and I got tired?"

Dix Estate Echoes

The state of the late film actor Richard Dix was asked at Los Angeles for $150 a month, or $79,000 to insure payments his divorced wife claims he agreed to make to Mary Ellen Dix until she marries or dies. The suit, brought by Silent Screen Actress Winifred Coe, remarried, says Dix agreed in 1934 to payments of $150 monthly. Dix died at 54 last September leaving his estate to his widow, Mrs. Virginia Webster Dix, and three children, Sara, 11, and twin sons, Richard and Robert, 14. . . . . Employees at the Government Telecommunications Ministry in Tokyo rushed to the windows. The shouting outside continued as Sadakichi Hitotsumatsu, communications minister back in 1948, continued bellowing: "Remember what a good boss I was. Vote for me for the House of Councilors June 4."

Chinese Jane Sues

Once billed by the defendant as "The Jane Russell of Hong Kong", Lana Wong, 24-year-old night club dancer, has sued Fong Wan, Chinese night club owner in San Francisco, charging that Fong advertised that she was still under contract to him. Because of these newspaper advertisements, she said, she couldn't get work.

Big 3 Eyed China's UN Problem

Pass Up Red Regime At Present

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

LAKE SUCCESS—The Foreign Ministers of the Big Three Western Powers took up the problem of China's representation in the United Nations at their recent London meeting, and decided to take no steps for the time being to ease the way for admission of the Communist regime.

Reliable diplomatic circles here said that the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Britain and France had discussed United Nations affairs several times during their session, with the accent on China's seat in the world organization.

The Foreign Ministers were said to have agreed that they would let the situation stand as it was, with each country maintaining its present position toward recognizing Peiping.

The lineup in the Security Council now shows that only one of the three Western Powers recognizes Communist China—Britain. United States spokesmen have made it plain that this country will not vote for admission of the Communists, and speculation had centered on whether France would switch her vote in favor of Peiping.

Elberton Girl Prize Winner

ELBERTON—Little seven-year-old Jane Dye today is winner of the Grand Champion prize of $50 with her Jersey milk heifer in the cattle show held at Elberton.

The Chamber of Commerce inaugurated the show with each of the State-wide entries being individually sponsored. The exhibitors were given a banquet by their sponsors following the show.

Mays Lists 3 Top Fears

CINCINNATI —(AP)— The president of Morehouse College told an interracial fellowship meeting here yesterday, "We have nothing to fear but sin, economic exploitation and racial prejudice."

The meeting was sponsored by the 162nd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, of Morehouse, stated the things mankind fears most never happen, urged the delegates to do the "Christian democratic thing and leave the rest to God."

The educator said there are three kinds of people—"those who rise above the status quo, those who defend the status quo and those who fall below the status quo."

Most of society, who are in the second classification, dislike the other two because they are exceptionally good above status quo or exceptionally bad below, he asserted. Dr. Mays added that the feelings are such because the exceptionally good disturb guilty consciences while the exceptionally bad disturb society.

Terry T. Busbee

What promises to be one of the most exciting races in the coming primary is headed by Terry T. Busbee, of Dooly County, against Matt L. McWhorter, in a bid for a seat on the Georgia Public Service Commission. McWhorter is running true to form, having come up under training in politics and business of corporation sympathy and control. He is a close relative, and closer friend, of the Hon. Hamp McWhorter, who is General Counsel for the Truckers' Association and the commission fixes its members' rates. This association is under the jurisdiction of the commission, and well known throughout the State.

There is a definite revolt against McWhorter among telephone users on account of the continued increasing rates. According to a Commission spokesman, there are five hundred and thirty-two thousand telephone subscribers, and except for a few isolated cases, each one has had a substantial increase in rates. These telephone subscribers are now called upon to pay an increase of over Five Hundred Thousand Dollars per month, over Six Million Dollars per year, for telephone service. They point out that McWhorter controls the Commission and fixes the rates. This is generally true with other rates.
